Presentation

The Spanish Agency for International Development Cooperation recognises culture as a key element in relations with the African continent, crucial to reaching sustainable human development and fundamental to deepening exchanges and mutual knowledge of different societies.

On this basis, the training seminar on Culture, Development and International Cooperation for French Speaking Countries of Western Africa, which as part of the ACERCA programme of Education for Development in the Cultural Sector was held in December 2007 in Africa House, in collaboration with the Observatory of Cultural Policies in Africa (OPCA), is to create a favourable environment for exchange relationships between experts from the participating countries and to take steps toward the materialization of the Cultural and Development Strategy –promoted by the Spanish International Development Cooperation Agency– in the African continent.

Previously, some initiatives that have been launched as part of this programme in Africa were the Seminar on Policy and Cultural Management in Lusophone Countries in Africa (Madrid, April 2006), the Museology Seminar which took place in Luanda (Angola) in March 2007 and the Recuperation of Historical Archives of the Cape Verde project, developed by the Cape Verde Heritage Institute.

Acknowledging the fact that the Spanish cooperation endorsers do not have a wide knowledge of cultural cooperation in this area, this publication aims to provide supportive, detailed information on key documents, agreements and points of reference to enable an impact on the dynamics resulting in the ability to integrate with other activities already underway.

Sometimes, the perception we have of the reality of African culture is distorted, this means that there is a necessity to have access to documents like this, which show a continent which has spent many years fighting to improve its conditions and escape from a certain anonymity to which the communication media impair their cultural expressions.
For that reason, this publication—which is presented as a compilation—aims to serve as a guide that contributes institutional references and thoughts from the cultural agents of member countries exchanging and strengthening cultural cooperation between Spain and Africa. In this way, it could be a great help to a variety of activities, coordinated by the ACERCA Programme, which will take place in Africa during 2009, like the Euro-African Campus of Cultural Cooperation, which will be held in Maputo (Mozambique) in 2009.

The intense trajectory of Máté Kovacs, coordinator and editor of this compendium, along with his long working experience in UNESCO and now in OCPA, enable us to access extremely valuable information which incorporates the necessary collective memory of processes started in the fifties and continues to the present day.

It is hoped that this document becomes a useful tool in our daily work and provides a more solid foundation for future projects. Knowing the agreements and decisions of the African cultural sector will help improve our actions in Africa and encourage further development in this field. These aims are fully supported by the Spanish Cooperation ACERCA Programme.

The Observatory of Cultural Policies in Africa (OCPA) is a regional centre of resource and service oriented to facilitate the development of the cultural policies in Africa.

One of OCPA’s most important objectives is to identify, collect, process and make easily accessible all kinds of information that may be useful for decision makers, cultural institutions, organizations and networks as well as cultural specialists (researchers, organizers and entrepreneurs) in Africa in developing more efficient policies and programmes.

In this respect, one of the main problems faced by African cultural specialists is that they lack information or do not have access to the scattered existing documentation that they may need in their work.

As one of first steps towards solving this problem, this volume will provide, in an unique document, a collection of reference texts, namely a selection of overall cultural policy reference documents adopted by UNESCO or the International Organization of the Francophony (OIF) and a compilation of reference documents concerning culture and its role in development in Africa.

As to the African regional reference text, the present volume contains some of the most important general policy documents (or extracts) and a selection of declarations and resolutions concerning culture, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government as well as by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of the African Unity (OUA)/African Union (AU) between 1963 and 2008. All these documents have been selected from the official web sites of UNESCO, the OIF and the OUA/AU.

The Compendium contains also an introductory Overview of Objectives and Priorities of Cultural Policies in Africa –From the Pan African Manifesto (1969) to the Charter for the Cultural Renaissance of Africa (2006) - established on the basis of the recommendations and guidelines formulated by some twenty major conferences and strategic documents, adopted over last forty years. It also contains a Reflection on a Cultural Policy Framework for Africa and a bibliography of some 600 documents and publications concerning cultural policy and cultural development in Africa, extracted from the data bases of UNESCO, OIF and OCPA.
We are aware that there may be other important documents that deserved to be included in this book. Some have to be identified, others are known, but not accessible for OCPA. In spite of these lacunae this volume already constitutes a representative corpus that illustrates the intellectual efforts of previous decades toward cultural policy in Africa and helps to capitalize on its results with a view to more efficiently implementing the generous ideas and initiatives envisaged for the preservation and enhancement of African cultures as the foundation and primary objective of human development in the African continent.

We consider this publication to be the start of many other complementary volumes, with documents adopted from the four conferences of African Ministers of Culture and African cultural institutions as well as at the level of the various African regional integration organizations.

In this revised version we decided to omit some of the documents included in the first edition (2006), due to the increase in volume resulting from the incorporation of reference documents in French:

- The general policy texts that concern cultural policy issues only partly and indirectly.
- The original versions of the Cultural Charter for Africa (1976) and the Dakar Plan of Action on Cultural Industries for Development in Africa (1992) as they were revised and up-dated by the First and Second AU Conference of Ministers of Culture (Nairobi, 2005 and Algiers, 2008).

We hope that this new edition will become a useful source of information for those endeavoring to promote the cultures and cultural policies of Africa.

Introduction

Objectives and priorities of cultural policies in Africa

From the Pan African Manifesto (1969) to the Charter for the Cultural Renaissance of Africa 2006

Historical Overview

The origins of African Cultural Policies trace back to the colonial period during which culture was considered a political tool for combating the colonial denial of African culture and the negative impact of external domination by European cultures on Africa and African Cultures.

As summarized by Marcel Diouf\(^2\), African artists and intellectuals, political groups and liberation movements looked at culture as a powerful weapon to fight assimilation policies and colonial cultural oppression. This led to the development of various cultural movements (such as the association of intellectuals especially of Bantu culture, Negritude groups, Senegalese Cultural Association, etc.) and to the organization of conferences that offered a forum for reflection (namely the First and Second Congress of Black Writers and Artists, which took place respectively in Paris (1956) and Rome (1959).

By the time these states were independent, there existed a set of fundamental principles for the development of African cultural policies. All regions took active part in this process and started to build up their cultural systems according to their cultural affinities, historical ties as well as their political and ideological options (e.g. Francophone countries, assisted by France, developed public cultural development policy, Anglophone countries put emphasis on developing arts initiatives, in Marxist regimes cultural was considered as a tool of the state ideology).

As a result of the experience gained at national level (on the basis of the reflection on Africa’s cultural problems, carried out on the occasion of various meeting and initiatives, such as the Colloquium organized in the framework of the First World Festival of Negro Arts (Dakar, Senegal, 1966) and UNESCO’s General History of Africa project), the participants of the Symposium of the Pan-African Cultural Festival (Algiers, 1969) were already in a position to propose a coherent conceptual framework for African cultural policies.

This first consolidated framework is contained in the Pan African Cultural Manifesto adopted by the participants of the Symposium, which discussed three main themes as follows:

• The realities of African culture
• The role of African culture in national liberation struggle and in the consolidation of African Unity
• The role of African culture in the economic and social development of Africa.

After having discussed these themes, the Symposium formulated a series of basic principles for African cultural policies and action based on a broad and dynamic concept of culture.

In this spirit the Manifesto underlines that culture, in its widest and most complete sense, enables men to give shape to their lives. Culture is essentially dynamic (in other words it is both rooted in the people and orientated towards the future). Africans should draw up a critical inventory of cultural components, in order, and get rid of archaic elements and the alienating foreign influence of colonialism.

Concerning the role of culture the Manifesto declares that culture is the essential cement of every social group, its primary means of intercommunication and of coming to grips with the outside world. It is its soul, its materialisation and its capacity for change. Thus culture is the totality of tangible and intangible tools, works of art and science, knowledge and know-how, languages, modes of thought, patterns of behaviour and experience acquired by the people in its liberating effort to dominate nature and to build up an ever improving society.

On issues related to cultural unity and diversity, the document stresses that African cultures, in their rich diversity, are specific expressions of a single universality. Beyond similarities and convergent forms of thought, beyond the common heritage, African identity is also a shared destiny, Africans are not only bound by their shared struggle for liberation but also by a shared future. This bond should be recognised by all in order to master it. Culture is a dynamic means of uniting the nation over and above tribal or ethnic divisions and African Unity above all forms of nationalism.
African languages play an irreplaceable part in this, as they constitute the mainstay and the medium of culture, the guarantee of popular support both in its creation, and its consumption. Language is one of these features in the life of peoples, which embody their genius.

As to the analysis of cultural realities the Manifesto put emphasis on the fact that cultures constitute a dynamic element in the life of African peoples, in both their spiritual and material aspects. African cultures have long been considered by colonialism to be outlandish and only relegated to museums. Africans have the task of securing their cultures be given due consideration and the same recognition as others. African culture would be lifeless if it ignored modern science and technology.

As to the role of African culture in the liberation struggle and African Unity, the Symposium stressed that for the African countries, that won their freedom and for those that were in armed conflict with colonial powers, culture had been and will remain a weapon. In all cases, armed struggle for liberation was and is a pre-eminently cultural act. On the other hand complete independence is a basic condition for the development of culture in service of the masses.

The Symposium clearly stated that culture plays a decisive role in the economic and social development of Africa. Culture, simultaneously representing a style of life, an economic and social relationship determined at a particular moment in human evolution, forms a totality with political life. As a permanent and continuous creation and the expression of the perenniality of a people, African culture definitely intends to put itself to the service of the liberation of Africa from colonialism in all its forms and from all forms of alienation, and to serve the economic and social betterment of the people. Safeguarded and experienced by the people, it becomes a motivating element in social and economic development and a factor in the transformation of the environment. The Symposium stressed at the same time that a society or a culture can remain the same while undergoing economic development.

The document points out that it is absolutely necessary to watch over the defence and preservation of African dignity and personality. This looking back or constant reference to the living sources of African identity must avoid a complacent and unfruitful evocation of the past, and imply an innovating adaptation of African culture to the modern requirements of well-balanced social and economic development.

African culture, faithful to its origins, must be revived and brought into the modern world by contact with science and technology in order to develop its operative capacities. While technology progresses by accumulation, culture progresses by creation and fidelity. All means of doing this should be set in motion.
Some months after the adoption of the Manifesto a Meeting of experts on problems of cultural policies in Africa (Dakar, 6-10 October 1969) was convened by UNESCO as part of the framework for preparing the Intergovernmental Conference on the Institutional, Administrative and Financial Aspects of Cultural Polices (Venice, September 1970). The objective of the meeting was to identify and discuss problems confronted by African countries in the formulation and implementation of cultural policies.

The participants agreed as to the need for cultural policies in African countries. They criticized the sparcity of the efforts and initiatives, the lack of coherent policies and the inadequacy of the funds made available for cultural activities.

They stressed that this situation was due to the lack of the recognition of the important role that culture and cultural action should play in the political and social life and in the economic development of the African countries. From a political point of view, culture has a role to play in helping to develop the African personality and the unification of the continent, while socially it is a key element of restoring the psychological and sociological stabilization of Africans “perturbed” by the tension between the technological civilization and African cultures.

It was pointed out that the responsibility of governments for cultural action inevitably fell to public authorities, since they were administering education and the mass media through which the developing countries can protect their local cultures and traditional values threatened by the powerful influence of foreign cultures.

The experts felt that there was a need for centralization of the planning and financing at national level, but they recognized the importance of decentralization at operational level, paying due attention to the needs and potentialities of the rural population. Very much in line with the funding strategies adopted thirty years later, it was clearly stated that there was a need for combining government funding with funds from the private sector and from bilateral and multilateral cooperation agencies as well as income producing cultural activities.

In view of the weaknesses of national capabilities and infrastructures in producing cultural goods (books, films, etc), the meeting stressed the need for a framework that would foster such infrastructure at the OAU and its regional bodies as well as their coordinated efforts and initiatives at the Pan African or sub-regional levels.

Among other topics the meeting stressed that the development of African cultures had to take into account the importance of the use of African languages as well as the positive and negative potentialities of new media (radio and television), which, pending on the content and forms of expression that they channel, can promote or destroy African arts and cultures.

Finally the meeting proposed a series of concrete measures (training, copyright, prizes, information, etc.) that could contribute to the promotion and protection of African artists.
Around 1975-1976, the reflection on cultural policies in the African region received a new impetus in the framework of the preparation of the Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa (AFRICACULT, Accra, 1975) and the elaboration of the Cultural Charter for Africa (1976).

As part of this process, the African and Mauritian Cultural Institute (ICAM, Dakar), on behalf of the OAU, organized two conferences on the Harmonization of African Cultural Policies (Libreville, 1974 and Freetown, 1975) for ministers of Cultural Affairs and their advisers.

As it appears from the proceedings of these events (published by the Nouvelles éditions africaines on behalf of ICAM, Dakar, 200 p.), the meetings examined the following priority issues:

- The Fundamental Principles of an African Cultural Policy
- Making Culture Democratic
- Inventory, Preservation and Development of the National Patrimony
- Spreading Culture and Cultural Exchanges
- Ways and Means of Governmental Cultural Action
- Critical Examination of the Mass Media
- Determination of Priorities - Choice of Means

As to the fundamental principles of an African cultural policy, the conferences unanimously recommended that cultural policies should be based on the following principles and aims:

- the rehabilitation of African culture,
- the strengthening of the dignity of the African,
- the promotion of the popular base of culture and the motivation of the masses,
- the liberation of culture itself and of African peoples still under colonial domination,
- the search for values stifled by colonisation,
- education of the masses and the elite in African cultures for unifying the social classes,
- avoiding cultural stagnation, by introducing selective elements from foreign cultures,
- unity and understanding between African peoples,
- the integration of cultural development in the economic development plans.

With a view to making culture democratic, the recommendations concern the following priorities:

- integrate African values, cultures and languages in education and literacy programmes, support and protect artists, craftsmen and creators of cultural works, harmonize cultural development with economic development as well as cultural policies and economic policies, produce cultural goods at reduced prices accessible to people, festivals, competitions, the creation of artistic troupes.

Priority actions proposed by the conference concerning the inventory, preservation and development of the national patrimony cover both tangible and intangible heritage as well as African aesthetics philosophy. They are as follows:
- Development of legislation for the protection of sites and monuments in line with international norms and conventions
- Development and up-dating of institutions; museums, research centres of oral tradition and African linguistics, African Culture clubs, theatres, etc., in the light of changing needs and aspirations,

For spreading culture and cultural exchanges all means should be utilized: the theatre, music, ballet, painting, sculpture, radio, television, clubs, cultural centres, museums, libraries, etc.

Interestingly the recommendations insist on the necessity to train specialists in management of cultural institutes and “animateurs”.

In relation with “Ways and means of governmental cultural action critical examination of the mass media: the press, radio, television, books” the recommendations put emphasis on the necessity to adapt the cultural content of media programmes and products to the needs of the population. They insisted also on the importance of promoting cultural communication through community centres and youth clubs and reactivating traditional means of communication.

With regard to the “determination of priorities - choice of means”, the ministers recommended to
- promote public policies for culture,
- adapt teaching programmes to development needs and the national cultural realities,
- recording the oral tradition,
- protect and promote national languages,
- protect and promote creators and their copyright,
- develop permanent research centres in the area of cultural action.
- increase in the budget for cultural action and research in the human sciences,
- sensitize and mobilize the masses in the cultural action,
- train specialists in the various fields of cultural policy and development.

A major landmark in the progression of African Cultural policies came in the form of the Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa
In its final declaration the AFRICACULT Conference, organized by UNESCO with the cooperation of the Organization of African Unity, highlighted, among other things, that

- the colonial domination over culture led to the depersonalisation of the peoples of Africa, falsified their history, systemically denigrated African values and attempted to replace African languages by those of the colonial powers;
- complete independence is the prime condition for the flourishing of culture;
- cultural identity serves as a foundation for the independence and the construction of modern African nations;
- African culture remains a decisive weapon in the fight for liberation and against colonialism, racism and apartheid;
- the full enjoyment of human rights can be ensured only in the framework of genuine political, economic and cultural independence;
- development must aim primarily at enriching human life by providing a harmonious balance of values;
- cultural authenticity and technical progress are the surest guarantee of cultural development and of the advent of new societies linking up with African humanism;
- it is necessary to bring about new attitudes and to reject alien cultural patterns and to make effective use of scientific and technological advances and the mass media so as to strengthen cultural identity;
- it is urgent to incorporate African values of civilization into educational systems and to take resolute steps to promote African languages and to draw up a systematic inventory of cultural heritages, especially in the historical, linguistic and artistic spheres;
- African cultural diversity is a factor of equilibrium and creative fertility, serving the cause of national integration;
- the wealth of the cultural heritage shared by all the peoples of Africa, which is the historical basis of African personality, is the surest guarantee of African unity;
- African creativity has never ceased to enrich the cultural heritage of mankind;
- African cultures remain receptive to outside contributions and are alert to the major trends at work in the modern world;
- cultural cooperation among free and equal partners fosters enrichment of cultures in a spirit of mutual respect and international understanding and world peace;

The representatives of the African Governments participating in this Conference declared that since “cultural identity serves as a foundation for the independence and the construction of modern African nations”, it is necessary to “recognize accordingly the responsibilities incumbent on African States with regard to the definition of national cultural policies, which must be geared to the policies decided on in the political, economic and social fields.” Furthermore they affirmed their “determination to implement or intensify our cultural policies for this purpose, bearing in mind the interaction, which takes place between them and the policies followed in regard to, inter alia, education, science and technology, communication and the environment”.

AFRICACULT was the first regional UNESCO conference to put emphasis on the necessity of giving full recognition to the cultural dimension of development.

The adoption of the Cultural Charter for Africa constituted the other major event in the consolidation of the reflection on culture and cultural policies in Africa. It was adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity meeting in its Thirteenth Ordinary Session, in Port Louis, Mauritius, from 2nd to 5th July, 1976, and until the adoption of its revised version in 2005 (Charter for Africa’s Cultural renaissance) it constituted the most important regional cultural policy reference document for the African States including those of North Africa.

The aims and objectives of the Charter are as follows:
• the liberation of the African peoples from socio-cultural conditions, which impede their development;
• the rehabilitation, restoration, preservation and promotion of the African cultural heritage;
• the assertion of the dignity of the African and of the popular foundations of his culture;
• the combating and elimination of all forms of alienation and cultural oppression;
• the encouragement of cultural cooperation with a view to the strengthening of African unity as well as a better understanding among peoples; development of dynamic African values and rejection of any impediment to progress.

By adopting the Charter the Heads of African States solemnly subscribed to the following fundamental principles:
• access of all citizens to education and to culture;
• respect for the freedom to create and the liberation of the creative genius of the people;
• respect for national authenticities and specificities in the field of culture;
• integration of science and modern technology into the cultural life of the exchange and dissemination of cultural experience between African countries, in the field of cultural decolonization in all its forms.

The African States recognized the need to take account of national identities, the assertion of which should not be achieved at the detriment of the cultural diversity within the State. They also agreed to work out a national cultural policy for satisfying cultural needs through the optimal utilization of all the available material and human resources and to integrate the cultural development plan in the overall program for economic and social development.

In 1976 the Charter identified the following cultural policy priorities:

- the transcription, teaching and development of national languages with a view to using them for the dissemination and the development of science and technology;
- the recording, conservation, use and dissemination of information on oral tradition;
- the adaptation of educational curricula to development needs and to the National and African Cultural and Social realities;
- the promotion of cultural activities, encouragement to artists and assistance to creativity in the people;
- the protection of creative artists and cultural assets;
- the development of research and the establishment of permanent research centres in the field of culture;
- research, on the basis of modern science, in the field of local African medicine and pharmacopoeia.

As to the concrete methods and means of implementing the objectives and priorities, the States parties agreed to undertake the following actions:

- introduce African Cultures and languages into all national educational systems;
- establish appropriate institutions for the development, preservation and dissemination of culture;
- train competent staff, at all levels;
- promote participation in cultural life as well as in the development and implementation of cultural policies, paying special attention to the active involvement of the young;
- provide a budget, essentially out of national resources, corresponding to the needs of culture and of research in the humanities, natural sciences and technology;
- organize national and pan-African cultural festivals;
- defend and develop the peoples’ culture and the advancement of creative arts;
- harmonize cultural policy with policies on information and communication for guaranteeing the use of the media for cultural development;
• ensure the total decolonization of the mass media and increase the production of African radio and television programmes, films, books, school manuals and records;
• assist collective methods of creation as well as individual artists through appropriate initiatives (competitions, prizes; fiscal measures, financial assistance, scholarships, training courses, national funds for the promotion of culture and the arts);
• prepare inter-African convention on copyright, set up national copyright offices and authors’ associations for protecting the moral and material interests of creative artists;
• protect African cultural heritage and property on the legal and practical levels, in times of peace and in the event of war;
• ensure that cultural assets, in particular archives, works of art and archaeological objects, which have been removed from Africa, are returned there;
• promote cultural cooperation at the inter-African and international levels through joint cultural activities (festivals, symposia, art exhibitions) and periodical discussions of major issues, exchange of persons, information, documentation and cultural material, establishment of cultural research centres on national, regional and pan-African levels
• create an Inter-African Fund for the promotion of cultural studies and programmes;
• create regional specialized institutions for the training of cultural professionals.

As proposed in the Charter the Intra-African Cultural Fund was created by the Heads of State and Government of the OAU meeting in their Seventeenth Ordinary Session in Freetown, Sierra Leone, from 1 to 4 July 1980. This event offered a new opportunity for the African States to review their cultural policy priorities and objectives some years after AFRICACULT and the adoption of the Charter.

According to the statutes of the Fund, cultural development consists in laying the foundations for a dynamic African cultural identity based on a heritage of values and a valuable asset of creativity.

As defined in the Statutes, constituting a regional cultural development strategy, the Fund must consequently encourage and support initiatives aimed at:
(a) Identifying, restoring, safeguarding, rehabilitating and promoting African cultural heritage in its material, intellectual, moral, artistic and concrete expressions;
(b) Promoting handicrafts, village and rural technology and services;
(c) Making African languages modern working tools as well as tools of communication and dissemination of knowledge, so as to express the real feelings of the people; translating in these languages literary, historical, philosophical and scientific works, which constitute the common heritage of mankind;
(d) Encouraging the development of African studies in such fields as traditional medicine, pharmacopoeia, handicraft, technology, art, oral literature, history and African philosophy;
(e) Combating all forms of alienation, cultural oppression and technology by carefully integrating them in the cultural universe of these peoples;
(f) Encouraging innovations, creativity and initiative by organizing notable competitions for technological and practical inventions, and by instituting prizes for researchers and inventors;
(g) Setting up appropriate mechanisms and bodies to ensure the integration of works of culture in industries and enterprises as well as in the domestic and social environments;
(h) Developing cultural industries in Africa as well as means of having more direct and greater contacts with the peoples through audiovisual aids and the mass media.

The Statutes underlines that these objectives can be attained through cultural and scientific publications, researches, debates, exchange of views, travels, cultural activities and radio cultural programmes as well as the establishment and expansion of cultural centres, homes and units; through meetings, documentation and the dissemination of scientific and cultural programmes.

As to cultural Cooperation the aim is to arouse in the young African States’ national and continental awareness, restore and consolidate the basis of African cultural unity by respecting and appreciating regional, national and local characteristics.

Furthermore, cultural cooperation must be such that it ensures Africa keep abreast with the time by asserting its cultural values.

In this connection the Fund was created with the objective to help to:
(a) Create and sustain regional and pan-African institutions, associations and groups;
(b) Increase cultural exchanges through exhibitions, symposia, seminars, film shows and exchange of persons so as to promote greater mutual understanding;
(c) Facilitate, among different countries, the movement of experts and the circulation of documents and achievements based on authentic and significant experiences;
(d) Develop the exchange of economic, social, cultural and teaching programmes among African radios, televisions and film companies;
(e) Stimulate regional and pan-African associations, institutions and groups to exchange views, harmonize their actions and, if possible, prepare joint programmes so as to ensure greater efficiency;
(f) Promote a “new pedagogy geared to African Unity” so that it does not remain the preserve of political circles alone. To this end, encourage schools, occupational and political circles and the public at large to reappropriate the traditional African values of solidarity and mutual respect.

Intra-African Cooperation must not be limited to the elite. It concerns the people, workers, peasants and artisans who also want to share the knowledge and the know-how. They, particularly, should be made familiar with the achievements of their counterparts living in similar environments.

The Fund’s resources shall be devoted to the sustenance and promotion of cultural studies and programmes in the following areas:

(a) Transcription, teaching and promotion of the use of national languages;
(b) Collection, preservation, use and dissemination of oral tradition;
(c) Adaptation of school curricula to the development requirements and socio-cultural realities;
(d) Promotion of cultural activities, creative artists and cultural activities among the people;
(e) Protection and encouragement of creative artists and cultural properties;
(f) Re-acquisition of all African objects of art of significant value;
(g) Construction of a museum of African arts;
(h) Development of continued research and research centres in the field of cultural activities;
(i) Modern scientific research into traditional medicine and African pharmacopoeia.

As 1969 and 1975 saw progressive steps made, respectively, by the Venice Conference and AFRICACULT, 1981 saw a new UNESCO initiative, which offered the opportunity to carry out an assessment of the evolution of African cultural policies through the Prospective Evaluation of the Application in the Member States of the Recommendations of AFRICACULT. (NB. UNESCO published also a substantive document Entitled “Situation and trends of Cultural Policies in Africa containing the information provided individually by the Member States to an inquiry by questionnaire, and some 20 monographies on the national cultural policies of African countries.)

This evaluation was carried out within the context of preparing for the Second World Conference’ on Cultural Policies (Mexico City, 1982). The purpose of this exercise was to highlight the basic problems of culture in Africa and to pave the way for the formulation of a new approach designed to strengthen the cultural dimension of development in general, in the spirit of the Third United Nations Development Decade, and at the same time to facilitate international cultural cooperation.
It was to be conducted by the African Cultural Institute (ACI/ICA, Dakar) in the light of the conclusions and recommendations of the Inter-governmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa (AFRICACULT, Accra, 1975) and using a prospective approach. It was to concern recent (the 1970s) and future (the 1980s) trends of cultural life, national policies and programmes, as well as the problems’ encountered in the course of their implementation.

As to principles, the assertion of cultural identity and a vigorous insistence on authenticity together with an all-embracing vision of culture constituted the fundamental components of the approach to culture in all the African countries visited. The assertion of cultural identity was all the more intensive as some countries saw it as a response to recent history, even as a weapon in the ongoing struggle and the difficult task of building a new society.

Every survey reiterates the same theme: only by being deeply rooted in one’s own specific culture is it possible to build a future for each African country.

Cultural identity and cultural roots are translated into real life by a feeling of belonging and in the survival, or revival, of a heritage, that is at once material, intellectual and spiritual. While recognizing the importance of the rich diversity of African cultures, almost every person interviewed by the investigators underlined the common features of the cultural reality, i. e. the existence of African value systems and behavioural models specific to African societies, especially in rural areas, which are threatened with extinction as a result of rural migration and ever wider dissemination, especially among young people, of foreign values and models linked to a certain form of modernization. From this point of view priority has to be given to the promotion of African languages and to the maintenance of traditional activities and know how.

Most country reports have agreed on the need to promote cultural diversity and pluralism, while preserving national unity, as well as on the importance of keeping in balance tradition and modernity which constitute the two pillars of African cultural development.

The evaluation made it clearly apparent that, in spite of common basic principles, African countries have adopted different responses to problems at policy level identified at the level of concrete policies and actions according to the models inherited in French or English speaking countries as well as to ideological models (Marxist systems). At this level the common problem is limited to the discrepancy between the policy declarations and the insufficient support made available for the implementation of the declared objectives.

This difference is apparent in all fields concerning cultural policy at the level of, existing or non existing, cultural policy texts, administrative structures, cultural development planning, cultural institutions, efforts concerning access to and participation in cultural life, creativity and the arts promotion, protection of traditional artists and crafts, heritage preservation and museum development, decentralisation, copyright and cultural legislation, cultural education at all levels, the media and cultural industries, science and technology, environment, and also cultural cooperation at the sub-regional, regional and international levels.

It also appeared that the obstacles, technical and political, were related to the lack of political will, appropriate financing, skills and human resources, the insufficiency of research and information, weakness or absence of concentration among the various partners and co-ordination with other policies and, in general, lack of priority accorded to culture in development cooperation strategies.

In the ‘80 the reflection on cultural policies in Africa, as in other regions, continued to develop in the light of the main conclusions of the World Conference on Cultural Policies (MONDIACULT, Mexico-City, 1982).

In summarizing the conceptual achievements of the series of regional conferences on cultural policies the Mexico-City Declaration on Cultural Polices stressed that “In its widest sense, culture may now be said to be the whole complex of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features that characterize a society or social group. It includes not only the arts and letters, but also modes of life, the fundamental rights of the human being, value systems, traditions and beliefs.

Culture constitutes a fundamental dimension of the development process and helps to strengthen the independence, sovereignty and identity of nations.

Balanced development can only be ensured by making cultural factors an integral part of the strategies designed to achieve it; consequently, these strategies should always be devised in the light of the historical, social and cultural context of each society”.

These principles in Africa are in particular reflected in the “Declaration of the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity on the Cultural Aspects in the Lagos Plan of Action”.

This Declaration, adopted by the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), assembled in their Twenty-first Ordinary Session, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, from the 18th to the 20th July, 1985, stressed the fact that the success of the Lagos Plan of Action and the Final Act of Lagos depends on the results of analyses of the inter-action between culture and the other social and economic sectors. Recognizing the need of facilitating the integration of human factors, cultural realities and the system of values into development strategies, it expressed the will of the Heads of State committed themselves for formulating administrative and technical measures for the integration of cultural dimensions into the Lagos Plan of Action.

In this respect the Declaration formulated in particular the following guidelines:

(a) Priority should be given to the role of culture as an essential dimension of the global development process, which should, however not be solely aimed at economic growth. There is an urgent need to integrate social and cultural factors within our development strategies so as to ensure a balanced and self-reliant development;

(b) development should thus take its root from our people's culture and be consistent with their values so as to emancipate them from them from all forms of economic, social, political and cultural dependence;

(c) cultural identities, as dynamic process of continuity, creativity and attitudes vis-à-vis innovation, should be the basis and finality of development, promoting and safeguarding stability and structural cohesion, as well as the social development of peoples;

The Declaration proposed to pool efforts in the context of the Lagos Plan of Action, so as to implement integrated programmes of activities meant to enhancing the self-development of peoples and stimulate their spirit of adaptability and their creativity.

The Heads of State committed their Governments, individually and collectively, to formulate

- national policies on the various areas, which will define and underscore the specific cultural development objectives as well as the conditions and methods for their implementation;
- harmonize national cultural policies at the regional and sub-regional levels within the context of the Lagos Plan of Action;
- formulate and make known within the next three years (1985 - 1988), national cultural policies, which will take into account the above cited cultural objectives;
- accord an important place to the promotion of scientific research for cultural development;
- give priority to the promotion of education for development;
- promote the development of cultural industries;
- promote traditional cottage industries;
- ensure cultural exchange and the development of cultural tourism;
- take the necessary steps to promote cooperation for cultural development at both the Inter-African and international levels.
Even though we do not have a complete series of the relevant documents, it is important to make a summary of the priority actions decided by the series of the four sessions of the Conference of African Ministers of Culture (CAMC) convened by the OAU respectively in Port Louis (Mauritius, 1986), Ouagadougou (Burkina Faso, 1988), Yaounde (Cameroon, 1990) and Cotonou (Benin, 1993).

One of the central issues dealt with in these four sessions concerned the strengthening of cultural cooperation at regional and international level through general guidelines or recommendations concerning various concrete initiatives (festivals, regional institutions, specialized programmes and research centres, prizes, etc.) or different disciplines, themes and cooperation frameworks (music, cultural industries, oral tradition, publishing, cultural education, crafts, cinema, cultural tourism, culture, education and development, Afro-Arab cultural cooperation, African Cultural Common Market, World Decade for Cultural Development, Cultural Aspects of the Lomé Convention, the Goré-Almadi Memorial, African cultural spaces, Slave roads, Iron roads, etc.)

More detailed information is available about the Regional Cultural Development Plan of the OAU, which was discussed in the Port Louis Conference (1986). This regional plan was conceived for a five-year period (1991-1995) with following aims:

- Adopt a mid-term plan for the cultural activities of the OAU with an integrated vision and a framework with a view to avoid fragmented efforts;
- Promote the creation of the African Cultural Common Market;
- Improve the cooperation with African and international partner institutions.

The plan contained seven areas of concentration concerning

- African languages,
- History of Africa,
- Cultural policies,
- Cultural cooperation for the development of Southern Africa,
- African museums and monuments,
- Performing arts and festivals,
- Exchange and dissemination of African films.

Since the mid ‘80s, OAU and UNESCO launched the organization of a series of consultations in the various regions of the continent on the problems of promoting cultural industries. The conclusions of these consultations led to the elaboration of the Dakar Plan of Action for the Development of Cultural Industries in Africa, adopted in July 1992, at the OAU Summit. It constitutes a basic reference for the formulation of strategies in this domain. This document was prepared during a summary meeting held in Nairobi in January 1992, on the basis of the conclusions and recommendations of 7 meetings of experts jointly organized by the OAU and UNESCO in the various sub-regions of the continent. It recommends a series of measures and actions to be taken at national and regional level, which are still ongoing and whose implementation requires the full attention

Objectives of the Dakar Plan of Action were defined as follows:

1. Convince decision-makers on the economic potential of cultural industries, for their integration in development strategies.
2. Set up an African Cultural Common Market and develop intra-African cooperation.
3. Strengthen the role of the private sector
4. Develop South/North cooperation as well as South/South cooperation and real partnership.
5. Enhance the organization and protection of creators.

In a realistic approach the Plan of action adopted the strategy to build on what already exists and develop it progressively, taking into account the available resources.

Among the measures to be taken the document proposed to

1. Undertake an assessment, as complete as possible, of the present situation, regional resources and potentialities;
2. Establish and up-date data banks on cultural industries;
3. Establish networks specialized in producing, marketing and disseminating cultural goods;
4. Inform and brief promoters on the investment prospects in the cultural sectors in Africa and outside Africa.

6. Take into account all the legal and institutional aspects relating to the organization of the African cultural spaces.
7. Establish Departments in charge of Cultural Development within regional bodies in charge of economic integration.
8. Elaborate on the measures to be taken in order to remove these obstacles and harmonize efforts of the various countries of the continent.
9. Outline the economic and cultural potentialities of the development of cultural industries.
10. Strengthen promotional action in order to advertise the values of African creators and cultural goods.
11. Analyse the existing treaties, agreements and conventions as well as regulations with a view to adapting them to the new requirements of the African Cultural Common Market.
12. Analyse the policies, legislative measures and other regulations affecting creative works with a view to adapting them to the requirement of the African Cultural Common Market.
13. Elaborate visibly, economically-rewarding cultural industry projects with a view to submitting them to funding agencies.
14. Study and adapt to an African context, the mechanisms existing in foreign countries in supporting the creative arts, the production and dissemination of cultural goods and services.
15. Promote interactions between decision-makers, planners, and different professional groups and other communities interested.
16. Coordinate policies of culture, languages, education and communication.
17. Coordinate cultural, social and economic policies with a view to broadening access and participation in cultural activities as well as consumption of cultural goods of quality.
18. Promote professionalism in production activities, and improve training for artists.
19. Improve technologies utilized in production and dissemination of cultural goods.
20. Improve and control the quality and authenticity.
21. Enhance research and innovation rooted in the African cultural creativity.
22. Guarantee the freedom of expression for the creative and performing artists.
23. Improve the status of creative and performing artists and the protection of their copyright.
25. Encourage the creation of groups and associations of creative writers, artists and professionals of the cultural industries.
26. Utilize cultural industries for the purpose of education, training, information and socio-cultural development.
27. Place emphasis on the production of endogenous cultural works.
28. Inculcate among the general public, by means of cultural industries, cultural values contributing to the furtherance of peace, security and cooperation.
29. Take practical measures to create the necessary conditions for better dissemination and appreciation of cultures, which are disadvantaged.
International Seminar on Culture and Development
(Harare 18th-23rd May, 1994)

The Seminar on Culture and Development was organised by UNESCO and the Government of Zimbabwe as part of the framework for the World Day for Cultural Development. It took place against the background of the deepening social, economic and political challenges facing African nations as a result of underdevelopment, unsatisfactory political leadership and governance, and the rising social and political tensions resulting from the economic crisis exacerbated by debt burden.

The Harare seminar provided an opportunity for discussions on wide-rangiing issues concerning the relationship between Culture and Development, with particular reference to the African context.

The seminar participants concluded that there cannot be a single universal model for development and that each nation or human community should be entitled to its own model of development. The focal thrust of the seminar's deliberations was inspired by the perception that true development does not lie in mere increase of material goods, but is intrinsically linked to the continued growth of meaningful human and social values as well as to the nurturing of harmonious relationships among national entities and between the nations of the world. From this perspective, the ultimate form of development was held by seminar participants to be a state of civilisation engineered by peace and Culture.

Having defined cultural industries as encompassing industrial, economic and commercial activities based on creativity in traditional cultural endeavours such as arts and crafts as well as in more modern fields such as audiovisual production, music production, book publishing, and fashion design, seminar participants stressed the need for African Governments to explore the economic potential of cultural industries as a source of national revenue and as a stimulant for economic growth. The deliberations of the seminar also led to a perception of the vital need for steps designed to integrate African Culture and savoir-faire in educational planning. Seminar participants also drew attention, to the dangers of the indiscriminate exposure of African audiences, to the growing invasion of radio broadcasts, television programmes and films emanating from a single part of the world, and demanded that adequate policy steps, should be taken to ensure indigenous production of programmes designed to promote African values.

The following topics were presented and discussed at the Harare International Seminar on Culture and Development:
1. The Integration of Culture in National Development Planning
2. Economic Structural Adjustment Programmes and their Impact on Cultural Development.
3. The Use of African Culture as a Tool for Development.
4. The Influence of the Cultural factor in Technological Development.
5. Women and Cultural Influences in Development Strategies.
6. The Role of Cultural Industries as a Catalyst to Development.
7. The Role of the Media in Development.
8. The Cultural Dimension of Tourism.

The discussion of these topics formed the basis for the recommendations of the seminar, which also took cognisance of the Dakar Plan of Action for the development of cultural industries in Africa.3 The Harare seminar also devoted some attention to the numerous regional and sub-regional cultural institutions that have come into existence in Africa in recent years. Seminar participants traced the failings, of many of these institutions, to a number of factors, which need to be remedied, if any new institutions are to be set up.

The Seminar recommended to • Create an African Forum for Culture and Development.
• Deliberate actions to be taken by governments to put in place legislation and policies that will allow indigenous skills and practices to play a leading role in the development of the respective nations.
• Assist local communities to organise themselves and give direction to their cultural activities, to avoid marginalization and/or exploitation.
• Ensure that project feasibility studies provide for the assessment of the cultural impact of development projects.
• Establish cultural performance indicators (CPI) that would allow effective assessment of the projects and stimulate good practice.
• Establish socio-cultural evaluation units and/or guidelines in ministries and funding agencies, in order to ensure that development policies, programmes and projects are culturally sound.
• Ensure that education curriculum at all levels include consideration of indigenous Cultures and heritage.
• Establish chairs and residency posts in Culture and Development in universities and colleges to promote research.
• Develop training for cultural workers, to include the enhancement of managerial skills and capacities.

• Formulate and implement gender sensitive and responsive programmes, for affirmative action, to acknowledge and further develop the opportunities for reinforcing women’s role in Culture and development.
• Formulate communication policies and enact legislation, which would counter undesirable satellite broadcasting and those monopolistic mass media, which erode the role and economic potential of local media in promoting indigenous Cultures and cultural industries.
• Promote the utilisation of the traditional means of communication, together with modern technology, so as to enhance the capacity of the traditional media and to empower local communities, in the development process.
• Governments of developing countries should encourage the patenting of works and materials in Arts and Cultural Products and adopt appropriate legislation to this effect.

Pan-African Consultation on Cultural Policies for Development (Lome, Togo 10th-13th February 1998)

The consultation was organized by UNESCO and the OAU in collaboration with the Government of Togo, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Ford Foundation, the Swedish International Development Agency (SIDA) and the Bellagio Group. Following the sessions and in plenary meeting and commissions, the participants formulated the recommendations regarding the main agenda items.

As to cultural pluralism and diversity, the consultation recommended the following:
• Put in place a constitutional or legal provision proclaiming and encouraging the cultural plurality of a nation.
• Civic education should include the principles of social and religious tolerance and respect for human rights, of which cultural rights should become an integral part.
• Protection should be accorded to promotion of the African mother tongues.
• Cultural heritage pertaining to different communities should be equally valued and represented in museum collections and archives.
• Creativity and innovation within the various cultural communities should be given the fullest opportunity to flourish including in media programmes, which expose community creativity.
• Policies should enable women and young people to fully participate in and contribute to national development and cultural life.

As to the redefinition of cultural policies for development the participants recommended to:

• Organize a large consultation to make an inventory of all aspects of cultural life with a view to laying the foundation of a new societal project and a coherent cultural policy.

• Put in place appropriate legal framework funds, administrative structures and institutions (including institutes of research and training) for implementing cultural policy objectives.

• Create within the OAU an African institute for stimulating and encouraging African culture.

• Support the CRAC, the sole regional institution for training cultural development agents.

• Support the action of the African Itinerant College in its mission of deepening the reflection on problems of culture and development.

• Create at the level of the OAU and sub-regional organisations a network by linking through internet cultural databases existing or to be set up at the national and regional levels.

• Create an African specialised institution of Education, Science and Culture through the OAU.

• Identify the different sources of public or private financing and mobilize their support for culture.

• Promote African studies for a better knowledge of the inventiveness of its peoples.

• Promote and develop the use of local languages.

• Promote the integration with the education system and other sectors as a means of development.

• Review and adapt cultural policies regularly to the evolution of both culture and development.

• Integrate culture in development policies.

• Train and sensitize political decision-makers and development agents to the importance of culture in development and society in general.

• Support the development of cultural industries as an integral part of overall development.

• Encourage book production as an indispensable component of education and of the dissemination of the African cultural patrimony.

• Broaden cultural policies beyond the traditional framework of “preservation” of culture.

• Review regularly the objectives and operational mechanisms of cultural institutions in the light of the changing needs.
As to the regional strategy of cultural development to be developed the meeting recommended to

- Strengthen cultural research and training as well as cooperation agreements between African institutions and cultural creators.
- Facilitate the circulation of African cultural products at the sub-regional and continental level.
- Strengthen the organisational capacity of African cultural institutions, especially those that target the development of human resources.
- Encourage cultural festivals and promote harmonisation of these initiatives.
- Organise regular meetings of African ministers of culture involving cultural creators and experts.
- Implement the decisions of the conference of ministers of culture regarding the African prize for literature.
- Develop new information technology system for the promotion of African culture.
- Involve private and non-governmental institutions in the design and implementation of cultural policies at both the national and the regional level (e.g. Ubuntu).

The Conference adopted a Plan of Action, which states that “cultural policy, as one of the main components of endogenous and sustainable development policy, should be implemented in co-ordination with policy in other social areas, on the basis of an integrated approach. Any policy for development must be profoundly sensitive to culture itself,” therefore the Conference recommended the Member States “design and establish cultural policies or review existing ones in such a way that they become one of the key components of endogenous and sustainable development.”

After the Conference, the OAU adopted a Programme of Action on the measures to be taken at the national and African regional levels for the implementation of the Stockholm Action Plan on Cultural Policies for Development (assessment and up-dating of national development strategies and cultural policies, readaptation national administrations and institutions to the changing cultural needs, development of cultural cooperation, namely in cooperation with the regional economic integration organizations, revision of

Symposium on the Policies, Strategies and Experiences in the Financing of Culture in Africa (Abidjan, Côte d’Ivoire, 5th-9th June 2000)

The Symposium was organized by the OAU with the support of the Ford Foundation, and in cooperation with the Ministry of Culture of the Republic of Côte d’Ivoire in Abidjan, Côte d’Ivoire, from 5 to 9 June, 2000, on the following issues:

- Introductory Report on culture in Africa
- Policies Strategies and Funding Experiences in Culture
- Extra-budgetary Sources and Resources
- Report of the Committee for the revision of the Constitution of the OAU Cultural Fund

The presentations about these topics made possible to better understand how policies, strategies and experiences of financing culture in Africa are conceived and implemented and threw light on the difficulties met in the application of respective programmes and on the place and role of government and alternative sources of finance.

Though the problems faced in the development of African culture are many and multi-dimensional, some of them may be identified as follows:

(a) Lack of awareness of the importance of culture;
(b) The absence of well-defined cultural policy;
(c) Lack of appropriate funding;
(d) The absence of skilled manpower.
(e) Absence of coordination;
(f) the underdevelopment of the African cultural market.

The different presentations on funding experiences of governmental and non-governmental organizations and private enterprises led among others to the following general recommendations:

1. Give clear definition to the mission, objectives, areas of intervention, markets and target public, activities, programmes and funding modalities;
2. Make projects more credible through a better definition of their missions, structures appropriate staff; more transparent accounting systems
3. Adopt flexible and well controlled management of allocated funds;
4. Alongside the major events, organize smaller initiatives easier to implement;
5. Strengthen the co-ordination of cultural networks and initiatives.

In order to clearly define their roles and manage the available resources efficiently, public and private actors should possess coherent and complete knowledge of the realities, problems, needs, practices, diverse initiatives, partnerships and activities in the field of cultural development.

In any case, the participants underlined the need to find mechanisms that would ensure better cooperation with the public sector. They proposed that the sources of funding should be diversified, by having an African lottery day from which they would recieve a percentage. They also indicated that there was a need to evaluate the activities funded by the OAU Cultural Fund in order to avoid the mistakes made in the past. Finally, the participants stressed the need to incorporate education, communication and training in the future activities supported by the new Fund.

Several concrete initiatives were taken in the follow-up of the Stockholm proposals, namely the Preparatory Experts’ Meeting of the Pan African Conference on Culture and Development (Lome, 1st-2nd June 2000) and also the series of consultations (Kinshasa, August 2000; Pretoria, January 2001; Cape Town, May 2001, Maputo, May 2002) that led to the establishment of the Observatory of Cultural Policies in Africa.

All these meetings permitted to discuss and review periodically the situation and problems of African cultural policies, as did the Consultative Meeting on the Intellectual Preparation of the Pan African Cultural Congress called together in Nairobi, in December 2002 in the perspective of relaunching the Conference of African Ministers of Culture on a broader basis in consultation with all stakeholders (artists, producers, entrepreneurs, managers, researchers, etc.).

From the point of view of the culture/development interaction, and their integration in development strategies, the recommendations of the Workshop on Culture and Development in NEPAD’S Programme of Action (Abidjan, Côte d’Ivoire, the 2nd to the 5th September 2003) merit a special attention. It was held at the initiative of UNESCO in Abidjan, Côte d’Ivoire from 2nd to 5th September 2003 in cooperation with the African Union and the Observatory.
of Cultural Policies in Africa. The aim of the workshop was to prepare a Regional Consultation to be held under the joint auspices of the NEPAD Secretariat and UNESCO with a view to reinforcing the place and role of culture in the guidelines and implementation of NEPAD’s programme of action.

The workshop participants underlined the need to build NEPAD development strategy on the values of African humanism and culture and they reminded that

- Culture forms the basis of all progress and all development
- Culture is at the heart of the economy of the traditional African society and continues to model attitudes and behaviours
- In the industrial societies culture occupies a key place in the GDP
- Culture has the incomparable ability to create a brand image for Africa
- It is through the effect of culture that Africa will acquire the means of reconquering its imagination and creativity
- Culture plays a fundamental role in popular education, controlling endemic disease and conflict resolution

After having discussed the situation and problems of arts and culture they proposed to integrate into the NEPAD Programme of Action namely the following priorities

- Strengthening the partnerships and solidarities that are required for the preservation and development of African culture;
- Developing training for artists;
- Protecting traditional skills and knowledge;
- Developing African art according to its own aesthetic norms;
- Provide assistance that would enable artists and producers to free themselves from the constraints of the market;
- Making a data base of quality artists and producers;
- Organising and supporting tours by African shows throughout the continent;
- Organising visits to cultural venues and events by school children and reinforcing the African cultural content of educational programmes;
- Preparing data base on cultural industries and policies in African countries;
- Simplify immigration regulations for facilitating the free movement of people, in particular of artists;
- Developing an African market for cultural events, goods and services (festivals, books, films, records, crafts, tourism, touring agencies);
- Reinforcing the public’s demand for cultural products and services by reinforcing cultural and artistic education for future generations;
- Support African creative arts for developing their contribution toward the development of cultural industries as well as towards economic development;
• Create a regional professional organisations protecting the interests of creative artists, namely against piracy
• Promote tax policy and systems of customs and pricing favourable to the development of cultural industries;
• Protect and promote African languages, oral tradition, immaterial heritage and traditional know-how;
• Base cultural policies and strategies on practical research and on evaluating needs of the populations;
• Lending special attention to identifying and promoting talent and genius;

As to the issues related to the interactions between cultural and economic development, the workshop participants underlined the need to
• Adapt Africa’s development strategies, including NEPAD to the context, by taking into account the experiences and social and cultural realities of the people;
• Respect cultural diversity in decision making processes concerning development programmes and projects;
• Base development action on participation by the populations, adopt the cultural approach and realize as systematically as possible the assessment of the foreseeable cultural impact of all development action.
• Encourage NEPAD to disburse the resources needed for the implementation of concrete cultural programmes and development programmes designed with a cultural approach.

In the last two documents special attention is paid to culture under Action Area 6: Culture.

As it appears in volume II, the main Strategic Objective concerning this area is to “Enhance the dynamism of African Culture and Creativity” which should be implemented through

• Strategy 1: Promote an African view of its heritage, its diverse cultures and its values, especially for a new generation of Africans, and its acceptance in the international arena;
• Strategy 2: Develop cultural and heritage industries throughout Africa;
• Strategy 3: Promote sports in Africa and take advantage of its exchange and integration capacity.
This document gives the following analysis of the cultural problematic of Africa:

“Africa is rich not only in natural and human resources, but is also endowed with a multitude of cultural diversities and ways of life. However, these diversities have not been well understood, at best, and misunderstood or often deliberately misinterpreted, at worst.

For centuries, the Slave Trade, colonial occupations, neo-colonial interference, and now globalization have all played against the development of African cultures and have eroded African social identities though they have not completely killed the dignity and self-esteem of Africans.

There have been efforts by Governments and civil societies to restore the cultural freedom of the Continent; and the struggle for spiritual salvation still continues.

The major project currently providing hope and mobilizing energy in Africa is the establishment of the African Union. In order to achieve this, it is just as imperative today that appropriate cultural policies accompany the construction of the African Union. The rationale is that this new edifice cannot be built on a foundation of a community of exclusively material interests; for, culture is and should remain at the beginning and at the end of development.

The cultural policies and programmes to be designed should provide the leaders and principal development actors with appropriate data and instruments to assist them to know African peoples and their ways of life in order to better serve them; promote peace on a sustainable and humane basis; use African languages for interaction and proximity administration; ensure that African democracy does not become a hostage of tribalism or ethnic preferences; promote pluralism, ethnic/cultural diversity, tolerance and respect for human rights; ensure that the issues of development are couched in African rationality; produce universal African texts which reflect the genius of the African people; and promote indigenous know-how as a basis for a truly “African Cultural Renaissance”. Africa is a land of cultural antiquity and diversity.

Different countries and regions of the continent host a bewildering variety of archaeological remains, spots of ancient civilizations and living, but often endangered - by looting and misappropriation - cultural heritages. It is the duty of the African Union in general and of Member States in particular to protect and preserve cultural heritages and make them real assets to their creators. For centuries, large quantities of cultural heritages have been removed from the continent either by individuals or groups owing to some historical advantages, which favoured their expatriation.

These cultural heritages are inalienable copyrights of Africa’s sons and daughters who have the right to repossess and use them for whatever ends: social, psychological and economic. Inter-African and inter-continental cooperation is key to the promotion of understanding and mutual acceptance among people with diverse cultural background. One of the tasks of the African Union should be to ensure that countries and cultural communities pursue the goals of cultural exchange, cooperation, and interaction. The Commission will see to it that cultural exchange policies as well as diplomacy and national, regional and pan-African cultural practices are developed. Exchanges of information and initiatives will be made at the bilateral and multilateral levels and especially in the area of cooperation. Some of the initiatives to mobilize communities are festivals, exhibitions, and theme fairs, at both national and international fora. Africa could therefore participate in the give-and-take rendezvous of world culture and develop its multiform input to humanity’s heritage.”

The detailed programme, proposed in this area by the Commission, is included in English in the Compendium under Part One, Chapter B.V. entitled “The African Union Commission’s Proposal for Africa’s ‘Cultural Renaissance’ - Action Area 6: Culture, Priority Programme 23”.

In this process mention should be made of the Nairobi Charter for the Cultural Renaissance of Africa, which was adopted by First AU Conference of African Ministers of Culture (Nairobi, 10th-14th December 2005) and endorsed by the Heads of State and Government of the African Union meeting in the 5th Ordinary Session (Khartoum, 23rd-24th January 2006). It was inspired by the Cultural Charter for Africa (adopted in Port Louis, Mauritius in 1976). In fact the revised version confirms the basic principles of the original document, however it was adapted in the light of the changing situation. In fact after the liberation from colonial occupation and apartheid, after African cultures have to face new challenges in the context of rapid globalization and persisting development problems as well as in the light of the new ideas and expectations related to the African renaissance.

In the preamble the Charter stresses that any African cultural policy should enable the peoples to preserve their cultural heritage and cultural diversity as a factor of development. They should promote cultural identity and diversity, while enhancing the dialogue between civilizations for combating the negative impacts of the ICT and globalization processes.

The aims and objectives of the Charter are to:

• promote freedom of creative expression and cultural democracy,
• rehabilitate and preserve African cultural heritage;
• affirm the dignity of the Africans and the popular foundations of their culture;
• combat all forms of alienation, exclusion and cultural oppression;
• integrate cultural objectives in development strategies;
• encourage cultural cooperation at the African and international levels for a better understanding among peoples;
• strengthen the role of culture in promoting peace and good governance;
• develop all dynamic values in the African cultural heritage that promote human rights, social cohesion and human development;
• promote access of all citizens to education and to culture,
• respect the freedom expression and creation, national and regional identities as well as the cultural rights of minorities;
• strengthening the place of science and technology in the life of the African peoples, including through the use of African languages;

With a view to preserve and promote cultural diversity and identity in the perspective of the African renaissance African States should
• recognize that cultural diversity is a factor for mutual enrichment of peoples and nations;
• defend minorities, their cultures, their rights and their fundamental freedom;
• recognize that cultural diversity is essential to national identities, and to building Pan-Africanism;
• foster mutual understanding, coordinate inter-cultural and inter-generational dialogue and present the contribution of Africa and its Diasporas to the building of universal civilization;
• commit themselves to work for African Renaissance;

With regards the basic principles of cultural development the Charter stresses the need for an in-depth renewal of national and regional cultural policies and urges the states to commit themselves to • protect and promote the freedom of artistes, intellectuals and men and women of culture on the one hand, and historical sites and cultural goods on the other;
• financially and materially support cultural initiatives in all segments of society;
• facilitate access to education and culture for all segments of the population;
• recognise that non-institutional actors are instrumental in cultural development: designers, private developers, associations, local governments, the private sector, etc.
• support cultural development through incentive measures in fiscal, legislative and administrative plans;
• build the capacity of the cultural sector and stakeholders through the organization of festivals, seminars, conferences, training and refresher courses at national, sub-regional, continental and Pan-African level;
• guarantee equal access of women and men to cultural expression, decision-making, art and cultural profession;
• recognise cultural expressions by the youth, according them their fair value and responding to their aspirations;
• recognize the role of elders and traditional leaders in cultural life and in modern mechanisms of conflict resolution and the inter-cultural dialogue system.

With regards to the promotion of arts and creativity, the Charter insists that Governments should

- provide financial, technical and other forms of assistance to stimulate artistic creation;
- create a fertile environment that fosters creativity in all its diversity;
- providing fiscal assistance and incentives including tax rebates for African cultural goods and services
- ratify conventions and other standard setting instruments that preserve and promote artistic, inter alia, the Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions (2005).
- aligne policy and legislation with international charters, conventions and other standard setting instruments;
- prepare inter-African convention on copyright;
- enact national and inter-African laws and regulations guaranteeing the protection of copyright.

As regards the protection of African cultural heritage, African States should

- ratify the relevant international instruments and align their national legislation with those standard setting instruments
- take steps against the pillaging of African cultural property and archives and ensure the repatriation of such cultural property to countries of origin.

Finally on inter and intra African cultural cooperation the Charter recommends to the African States to

- acknowledge that it is vital to establish inter-African cultural cooperation as a contribution to the mutual understanding of the cultures of other States for the enrichment of African cultures, secondly, between Africa and the rest of the world particularly with the Diaspora.
- strengthen the links, including but not restricted to cultural, business, educational, financial, scientific and technical, between Africa and the African Diaspora around the world.

The African Union Conference of Ministers of Culture considered also timely to revise and up-date the Dakar Plan of Action for the Development of Cultural Industries in Africa (1992). This became necessary due to the rapid changes occurred over the last fifteen years in the cultural sphere under impact of globalization and new information and communication technologies. Thus at its first session the AU Conference of Ministers of Culture (Nairobi, 13 - 14 December 2005) decided to adopt the Nairobi Plan of Action for Cultural Industries in Africa (2005).

In its first too chapters (A. and B.), this 46 page document makes a thorough analysis of the problems and challenges that the development of cultural industries is facing in the new context. From this analysis it appears evident that a number of developments associated with globalisation are both an opportunity and a threat depending on the extent of development of the cultural industries in different countries. These challenges require special attention if Africa’s rich cultural diversity is to be preserved.

To this effect, the third part (C.) contains the Plan of Action, which proposes a set of principles and measures for development of endogenous cultural industries in Africa within the perspective of setting up an African cultural common market.

It proposes to implement a coherent action plan for mobilizing the cultural resources as a means for combating poverty in the context of sustainable development.

To this end, it is desirable for Africa to encourage diversification or even diversity of these industries for protecting Africa’s rich heritage and creative potential in the spirit of the UNESCO Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity (2001) and the Convention on the preservation and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions (2005) as well as other reference documents listed under “Antecedents of the project”.

The objectives of the Plan of Action are defined as follows

A. General
Guarantee the organisation, production, distribution, exhibition, and preservation of the products of African cultural industries.

B. Specific
These may be divided into three types: political, social and economic, applied broadly in the different sectors.

I. Economic
1. Generate new resources for the economic development of Africa and the creation of new jobs and income generation opportunities.
2. Open up new markets for African culture in and outside of Africa
3. Strengthen the African cultural identity and creativity as well as broaden people’s participation in endogenous cultural development.
4. Strengthen the competitiveness of African cultural goods within the framework of globalisation and the liberalisation of markets.
5. Improve national capacities for creating, producing, distributing and exhibiting cultural goods.
6. Strengthen private and community initiatives of small and medium enterprises.
7. Enhance the organisation and protection of creators.

II. Social
1. Strengthening African cultural identity and creativity as well as broaden people’s participation in endogenous cultural development.
2. Strengthening the acknowledgement of the cultural dimension of sustainable development in Africa.
3. Bring about new and pluralistic forums of cultural expression supporting the installation of democracy in African societies.

III. Political
1. Achieve better regional integration.
2. Reduce the dependence on the wider world outside of Africa for the production and distribution of cultural goods.
3. Adopt flexible responses to initiatives from the African private sector towards the development of cultural industries.
4. Facilitate new institutional partnerships between the public sector, private sector and civil society such as within the framework of UNESCO’s Global Alliance for Cultural Diversity and NEPAD.
5. Strengthen the role of the private sector and civil society.
6. Develop South/North cooperation as well as South/South cooperation and real partnership.

In the subsequent chapters the document makes general proposals concerning the general aspects of the implementation of the Plan of Action (strategy, timeframe, mechanisms of monitoring and evaluation, costs, responsibilities).

As to the action needed it recommends the following priority projects:
- Mapping of existing cultural activities, structures, resources and important valuable products within African member states.
- Identify and take into consideration regional and sectoral specificities and strengths to enable the rationalisation of legislation, policies and resources.
- Research to assess economic impact of cultural industries and initiatives
- Set up regional coordinators/cultural think tanks to source information and to debate the status of each sub-sectors.
In the subsequent sections the Plan of Action proposes a long list of indicative measures to be taken at the general level for promoting cultural industries and new technologies as well as for developing initiatives, cultural cooperation and capacity building. These measures are followed with a series of recommendations sector by sector (music and living arts, cinema, radio and television, publishing and printing industries, handicrafts and endogenous creative works, tourism, copyright and piracy).

The proposed actions are meant to bring about the following expected results and products:

1. Strengthening of the African cultural identity and creativity as well as broadening of people’s participation in endogenous cultural development.
2. Generating new resources for the economic development of Africa and creation of new jobs and income generation opportunities.
3. Improving national capacities of creating, producing and distributing cultural goods.
4. Reducing dependence on the wider world outside Africa in the production and distribution of cultural goods.
5. Opening up in and outside Africa new markets for African culture and economy.
6. Achieving better regional integration.
7. Bringing about new and pluralistic forums of cultural expression supporting the installation of democracy in African societies.
8. Strengthening of private and community initiatives of small and medium enterprises.
9. Strengthening the acknowledgement of cultural dimension of development in Africa.
10. Adopting flexible responses to initiatives from the African private sector towards the development of cultural industries.
11. Facilitate new institutional partnerships between the public sector, private sector and civil society such as within the framework of UNESCO’s Global Alliance for Cultural Diversity and NEPAD.

To achieve the objectives of the Plan of Action, it will be necessary to make use of all the African and International Cooperation Networks. In this regard, the AU and UNESCO, in consultation with the Member States concerned, will need to identify partners of good will, in order to sensitise them and make them aware of their responsibilities.
Concluding remarks

As to the positive aspects, the present overview reveals the great continuity and richness of the reflection on the problems of African culture carried out over the last thirty or forty years.

It shows also that this process of reflection resulted in a corpus of concepts and strategic proposals that constitute a consolidated basis for orienting the formulation, monitoring and evaluation of cultural policies at national and regional levels.

These basic concepts and their interpretations have always been in line with the evolution of international reflection. Committed from beginning to a broad concept of culture, African intellectuals underlined its dynamic character and its fundamental role in nation building and socio-economic development.

While stressing the importance of the preservation of African identity and authenticity, they insisted on the need to assess and, if necessary, adapt and update their constitutive elements taking into account the new needs and realities of the African societies as well as the evolution of cultural trends and practices. They also opted for an open approach to mutual enrichment resulting from balanced and two way exchanges between cultures.

The priority concern of respecting the cultural diversity, considered as a specific expression of the unity and universality of human creativity and heritage, appears also as a basic requirement since the Pan African Manifesto.

Due to the vivacity of oral tradition and traditional knowledge, the need to extend the concept of the cultural heritage to its intangible elements has been in evidence in all the cultural policy discussions.

It is important to underline also the importance attached to the democratic approach to cultural processes. While stressing the importance of the encouragement of artistic creation by individuals, the various documents insist on the people’s creativity, source and origin of all cultures. They underline also the need to enlarge participation to cultural life, beyond the educated elite, to all groups of the populations, namely the young.

These are very positive elements that can encourage Africans to intensify their efforts in developing the theory and practice of cultural policies.

But the documents also reveal the dark side of the situation. They show the lack of a practical impact of these ideas due to the persistent discrepancy between the ambition of the cultural policy declarations and the means made available for their implementation.

As a consequence of lack of attention paid to culture and cultural policies in national development strategies over the four decades of independence, after the alienating impact of colonial history, African cultures seem today seriously threatened by the uncontrolled effects of globalization and rapid socio-economic transformation processes and by the invasion of foreign models and mass cultural products.

These major changes very strongly affect the cultural life in African societies. The ways of life, the ancestral values, the endogenous forms of solidarity and expression, the traditional knowledge and know-how are marginalized or are lost. Heavy threats also weigh on the rich diversity of local cultures, oral traditions and languages as well as on African heritage, cultural and the natural.

Young people are increasingly loosing ties with the traditional cultures. Millions migrants from rural areas to industrial and urban zones as well as huge masses displaced due to ethnic conflicts and civil wars are cut from their cultural roots.

If African cultures are to meet these challenges and play a dynamic role in regional development, cultural life and creativity should be preserved and developed through coherent and efficient cultural policies harmonized with national and regional development strategies.

However, many countries do not have any national cultural policies. In other cases official cultural policies are not adapted to the populations’ needs and situations. In fact, for great masses of the population, in particular in rural areas, culture remains essentially a part of the traditional way of life of their community for which the cultural activities, goods and services proposed by the official cultural institutions and business sector do not have any relevance.

In most cases the implementation of adopted cultural policies is hindered by complex political and economic problems. The weakness of institutions, the persisting financial constraints and the lack of specialized personnel and infrastructures cruelly limit their effectiveness.

The development of alternative mechanisms of financing is hindered by the precarious situation of the private sector and the absence of a tradition of mecenate. Vis-à-vis the pressing material needs, governments and the international development aid organizations are reluctant to give priority to culture within the framework of national development strategies and international cooperation programmes.

Hindered by the absence of capital and investments (the weakness of the capacity of acquisition), the ill controlled piracy, the fragmented markets and the unfavourable tax and custom policies, African cultural industries and media cannot effectively support the creation and distribution of cultural and artistic goods and services. Consequently, the African cultural sector does not participate in nor benefit from the economic development of the continent, nor in the international cultural exchanges to its fullest potential.

In Africa, cultural policy research and information is either absent or insufficiently developed. Much of the existing research is not of the kind that readily finds an audience beyond the academic community. Methods and tools for data collection and analysis on cultural processes are far less developed than in other fields. Thus, cultural policy is all too often made with scant knowledge of the complex problems that it is supposed to address.

Aware of these problems the African Union is now planning to renew its efforts for developing cultural policy and cooperation in the region following-up the decisions and recommendations of the First session of the AU Conference of Ministers of Culture (Nairobi, December 2005), the 6th Ordinary session of the Assembly of the African Heads of State and Government (Khartoum, January 2006), which devoted a special session to culture and education, and the First Pan African Cultural Congress (Addis Ababa, November 2006).

1.1. Declaration of the principles of international cultural cooperation (1966)

The General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, met in Paris for its fourteenth session, this fourth day of November 1966, being the twentieth anniversary of the foundation of the Organization,

Recalling that the Constitution of the Organization declares that “Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed” and that the peace must be founded, if it is not to fail, upon the intellectual and moral solidarity of mankind,

Recalling that the Constitution also states that the wide diffusion of culture and the education of humanity for justice and liberty and peace are indispensable to the dignity of man and constitute a sacred duty, which all the nations must fulfil in a spirit of mutual assistance and concern,

Considering that the Organization’s Member States, believing in the pursuit of truth and the free exchange of ideas and knowledge, have agreed and determined to develop and to increase the means of communication between their peoples,

Considering that, despite the technical advances, which facilitate the development and dissemination of knowledge and ideas, ignorance of the way of life and customs of peoples still presents an obstacle to friendship among the nations, to peaceful cooperation and to the progress of mankind,

Taking account of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, the United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Declaration on the Promotion among Youth of the Ideals of Peace, Mutual Respect and Understanding between Peoples, and the Declaration on the admissibility of Intervention in the Domestic Affairs of States and the Protection of their Independence and Sovereignty, proclaimed successively by the General Assembly of the United Nations, Convinced by the experience of the Organization’s first twenty years that, if international cultural cooperation is to be strengthened, its principles require to be affirmed,

Proclaims this Declaration of the principles of international cultural cooperation, to the end that governments, authorities, organizations, associations and institutions responsible for cultural activities may constantly be guided by these principles; and for the purpose, as set out in the Constitution of the Organization, of advancing, through the educational, scientific and cultural relations of the peoples of the world, the objectives of peace and welfare that are defined in the Charter of the United Nations:

3. To contribute to the application of the principles set out in the United Nations Declarations that are recalled in the Preamble to this Declaration;
4. To enable everyone to have access to knowledge, to enjoy the arts and literature of all peoples, to share in advances made in science in all parts of the world and in the resulting benefits, and to contribute to the enrichment of cultural life;

Any mark of hostility in attitudes and in expression of opinion shall be avoided. Every effort shall be made, in presenting and disseminating information, to ensure its authenticity.

Article VIII
Cultural cooperation shall be carried on for the mutual benefit of all the nations practising it. Exchanges to which it gives rise shall be arranged in a spirit of broad reciprocity.

Article IX
Cultural cooperation shall contribute to the establishment of stable, long-term relations between peoples, which should be subjected as little as possible to the strains, which may arise in international life.

Article X
Cultural cooperation shall be specially concerned with the moral and intellectual education of young people in a spirit of friendship, international understanding and peace and shall foster awareness among States of the need to stimulate talent and promote the training of the rising generations in the most varied sectors.

Article XI

1. In their cultural relations, States shall bear in mind the principles of the United Nations. In seeking to achieve international cooperation, they shall respect the sovereign equality of States and shall refrain from intervention in matters, which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State.

1.2. Recommendation on participation by the people at large in cultural life and their contribution to it (1976)

The General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, meeting in Nairobi from the 26th October to the 30th November 1976, at its nineteenth session,

Recalling that under the terms of Article 27 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, “everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits”,

Recalling that the Constitution of UNESCO states, in its preamble, that the wide diffusion of culture, and the education of humanity for justice and liberty and peace are indispensable to the dignity of man,

Recalling the provisions of the Declaration of the Principles of International Cultural Cooperation adopted by the General Conference of UNESCO on the 4th November 1966 at its fourteenth session, and in particular Article I, which states that “each culture has a dignity and value, which must be respected and preserved”, and Article IV, which stipulates that one of the aims of international cultural cooperation is “to enable everyone to have access to knowledge, to enjoy the arts and literature of all peoples, to share in advances made in science in all parts of the world and in the resulting benefits, and to contribute to the enrichment of cultural life”, and also the provisions of the Final Act of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to the effect that the participating States, “desiring to contribute to the strengthening of peace and understanding among peoples and to the spiritual enrichment of the human personality without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion”, will set themselves the objective, amongst others, of promoting access by all to their respective cultural achievements,

Considering that cultural development not only complements and regulates general development but is also a true instrument of progress,

Considering:

(a) that culture is an integral part of social life and that a policy for culture must therefore be seen in the broad context of general State policy, and that culture is, in its very essence, a social phenomenon resulting from individuals joining and co-operating in creative activities,

(b) that culture is today becoming an important element in human life and one of the principal factors in the progress of mankind, and that an essential premise for such progress is to ensure the constant growth of society’s spiritual potential, based on the full, harmonious development of all its members and the free play of their creative faculties,

(c) that culture is not merely an accumulation of works and knowledge, which an élite produces, collects and conserves in order to place it within reach of all; or that a people rich in its past and its heritage offers to others as a model, which their own history has failed to provide for them,

(d) that culture is not limited to access to works of art and the humanities, but is at one and the same time the acquisition of knowledge, the demand for a way of life and the need to communicate,

Considering that participation by the greatest possible number of people and associations in a wide variety of cultural activities of their own free choice is essential to the development of the basic human values and dignity of the individual, and that access by the people at large to cultural values can be assured only if social and economic conditions are created that will enable them not only to enjoy the benefits of culture, but also to take an active part in overall cultural life and in the process of cultural development,

Considering that access to culture and participation in cultural life are two complementary aspects of the same thing, as is evident from the way in which one affects the other - access may promote participation in cultural life and participation may broaden access to culture by endowing it with its true meaning - and that without participation, mere access to culture necessarily falls short of the objectives of cultural development,

Noting that cultural action often involves only a minute proportion of the population and that, moreover, existing organizations and the means used do not always meet the needs of those who are in a particularly vulnerable position because of their inadequate education, low standard of living, poor housing conditions and economic and social dependence in general,
Noting that there is often a wide discrepancy between the reality and the proclaimed ideals, declared intentions, programmes or expected results,

Considering that while it is essential and urgent to define objectives, contents and methods for a policy of participation by the people at large in cultural life, the solutions envisaged cannot be identical for all countries, in view of the current differences between the socio-economic and political situations in States,

Reaffirming the principles of respect for the sovereignty of States, non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries, equality of rights and the right of peoples to self-determination,

Aware of the responsibility, which devolves upon Member States to implement cultural policies for the purpose of advancing the objectives set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, the Constitution of UNESCO, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and the Declaration on the Principles of International Cultural Cooperation,

Bearing in mind that elimination of the economic and social inequality, which prevents broad sections of the population from gaining access to knowledge, which is the foundation of science and technology, and from becoming aware of their own cultural needs, implies broader participation on their part; that to these obstacles must be added a resistance to change, and barriers of all kinds, whether they are of political or commercial origin or take the form of a reaction by closed communities,

Considering that the problem of access and participation can be solved by collective approaches extending to many sectors and aspects of life; that such approaches should be diversified according to the special characteristics of each community, the whole forming a true design for living calling for basic policy options,

Considering that access to culture and participation in cultural life are essential components of an overall social policy dealing with the condition of the working masses, the organization of labour, leisure time, family life, education and training, town planning and the environment,

Aware of the important role that can be played in cultural and social life by: young people, whose mission is to contribute to the evolution and progress of society; parents, particularly because of the decisive influence, which they exercise on the cultural education of children and the development of their creativity; elderly people who are available to discharge a new social and cultural function; workers, because of the active contribution they make to social changes; artists, as creators and bearers of cultural values; cultural development personnel whose task is to secure the effective participation in cultural life of all sections of the population and to ascertain and express their aspirations, relying for this purpose on the collaboration of the spontaneous leaders of the community,

Considering that access and participation, which should provide everyone with the opportunity not only to receive benefits but also to express himself in all the circumstances of social life, imply the greatest liberty and tolerance in the fields of cultural training and the creation and dissemination of culture, Considering that participation in cultural life presupposes an affirmation of the personality, its dignity and value, and also the implementation of the fundamental rights and freedoms of man attested by the Charter of the United Nations and international legal instruments concerning human rights, and that the cultural development of the individual is hindered by such phenomena as the policy of aggression, colonialism, neo-colonialism, fascism and racism in all its forms and manifestations, as well as by other causes, Considering that participation in cultural life takes the form of an assertion of identity, authenticity and dignity; that the integrity of identity is threatened by numerous causes of erosion stemming, in particular, from the prevalence of inappropriate models or of techniques, which have not been fully mastered, Considering that the assertion of cultural identity should not result in the formation of isolated groups but should, on the contrary, go hand in hand with a mutual desire for wide and frequent contacts, and that such contacts are a fundamental requirement without which the objectives of the present recommendation would be unattainable, Bearing in mind the fundamental part played by general education, cultural education and artistic training, and the use of working time and free time, with a view to full cultural development, in a context of life-long education, Considering that the mass media can serve as instruments of cultural enrichment, both by opening up unprecedented possibilities of cultural development, in contributing to the liberation of the latent cultural potential of individuals, to the preservation and popularization of traditional forms of culture, and to the creation and dissemination of new forms, and by turning themselves into media for group communication and promoting direct participation by the people, Considering that the ultimate objective of access and participation is to raise the spiritual and cultural level of society as a whole on the basis of humanistic values and to endow culture with a humanistic and democratic content, and that this in turn implies taking measures against the harmful effect of “commercial mass culture”, which threatens national cultures and the cultural development of mankind, leads to debasement of the personality and exerts a particularly harmful influence on the young generation, Having before it, as item 28 of the agenda of the session, proposals concerning participation by the people at large in cultural life and their contribution to it, Having decided at its eighteenth session that this question should be made the subject of an international regulation, to take the form of a recommendation to Member States,
Adopts, this twenty-sixth day of November 1976, the present Recommendation.
The General Conference recommends Member States to implement the following provisions, taking whatever legislative or other steps may be required
- in conformity with the constitutional practice of each state and the nature of the question under consideration - to apply the principles and norms formulated in this Recommendation within their respective territories,

The General Conference recommends Member States to bring this Recommendation to the knowledge of authorities, institutions and organizations, which can help to ensure participation by the people at large in cultural life and their contribution to it.

The General Conference recommends Member States to submit to it, at such items and in such manner as it shall determine, reports concerning the action they have taken upon this Recommendation.

I. Definitions and scope of the recommendation

1. This Recommendation concerns everything that should be done by Member States or the authorities to democratize the means and instruments of cultural activity, so as to enable all individuals to participate freely and fully in cultural creation and its benefits, in accordance with the requirements of social progress.

2. For the purposes of the Recommendation:
   (a) by access to culture is meant the concrete opportunities available to everyone, in particular through the creation of the appropriate socio-economic conditions, for freely obtaining information, training, knowledge and understanding, and for enjoying cultural values and cultural property;
   (b) by participation in cultural life is meant the concrete opportunities guaranteed for all - groups or individuals - to express themselves freely, to act, and engage in creative activities with a view to the full development of their personalities, a harmonious life and the cultural progress of society;
   (c) by communication is meant relations between groups or individuals desirous of freely exchanging or pooling information, ideas and knowledge with a view to promoting dialogue, concerted action, understanding and a sense of community while respecting their originality and their differences, in order to strengthen mutual understanding and peace.

3. For the purposes of the Recommendation:
   (a) the concept of culture has been broadened to include all forms of creativity and expression of groups or individuals, both in their ways of life and in their artistic activities;
   (b) free, democratic access to culture of the people at large presupposes the existence of appropriate economic and social policies;
   (c) participation in cultural life presupposes involvement of the different social partners in decision-making related to cultural policy as well as in the conduct and evaluation of activities; free participation in cultural life is related to:

I. a development policy for economic growth and social justice;

II. a policy of life-long education, which is geared to the needs and aspirations of all people and makes them aware of their own intellectual potentialities and sensitivity, provides them with cultural education and artistic training, improves their powers of self-expression and stimulates their creativity, thus enabling them more successfully to master social changes and to participate more fully in the community life of society;

III. a science and technology policy inspired by the resolve to safeguard the cultural identity of the peoples;

IV. a social policy directed towards progress and, more precisely, the attenuation - with a view to their elimination - of the inequalities handicapping certain groups and individuals, especially the least privileged, in regard to their living conditions, their opportunities and the fulfilment of their aspirations;

V. an environmental policy designed, through the planned use of space and the protection of nature, to create a background to living conducive to the full development of individuals and societies;

VI. a communication policy designed to strengthen the free exchange of information, ideas and knowledge, in order to promote mutual understanding, and encouraging to this end the use and extension of both modern and traditional media for cultural purposes;

VII. a policy for international cooperation based on the principle of equality of cultures, mutual respect, understanding and confidence and strengthening of peace.

II. Legislation and regulations

4. It is recommended that Member States, if they have not already done so, adopt legislation or regulations in conformity with their national constitutional procedures, or otherwise modify existing practices in order to:

(a) guarantee as human rights those rights bearing on access to and participation in cultural life, in the spirit of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and in accordance with the ideals and objectives set forth in the United Nations Charter and in the Constitution of UNESCO;

(b) provide effective safeguards for free access to national and world cultures by all members of society without distinction or discrimination based on race, colour, sex, language, religion, political convictions, national or social origin, financial situation or any other consideration and so to encourage free participation by all sections of the population in the process of creating cultural values;
(c) pay special attention to women's full entitlement to access to culture and to effective participation in cultural life;
(d) promote the development and dissemination of national cultures and the development of international cooperation in order to make the cultural achievements of other peoples better known and to strengthen friendship and mutual understanding;
(e) create appropriate conditions enabling the populations to play an increasing active part in building the future of their society, to assume responsibilities and duties and exercise rights in that process;
(f) guarantee the recognition of the equality of cultures, including the cultures of national minorities and of foreign minorities if they exist, as forming part of the common heritage of all mankind, and ensure that they are promoted at all levels without discrimination; ensure that national minorities and foreign minorities have full opportunities for gaining access to and participating in the cultural life of the countries in which they find themselves in order to enrich it with their specific contributions, while safeguarding their right to preserve their cultural identity;
(g) protect, safeguard and enhance all forms of cultural expression such as national or regional languages, dialects, folk arts and traditions both past and present, and rural cultures as well as cultures of other social groups;
(h) ensure that the handicapped are integrated in cultural life and have opportunities of contributing to it;
(i) ensure equality of access to education;
(j) guarantee freedom of expression and communication serving to strengthen the ideals of humanism;
(k) bring about conditions conducive to creative work and ensure the freedom of creative artists and the protection of their works and rights;
(l) improve the professional status of the various categories of personnel required for the implementation of cultural policies;
(m) ensure that cultural education and artistic training are given their proper place in the curricula of educational and training establishments, and extend enjoyment of the artistic heritage to the population outside the education system;
(n) multiply opportunities for intellectual, manual or gestural creation and encourage artistic training, experience and expression with a view to bringing about the integration of art and life;
(o) provide the mass media with a status ensuring their independence, due attention being paid to the effective participation of creative artists and the public; these media should not threaten the authenticity of cultures or impair their quality; they ought not to act as instruments of cultural domination but serve mutual understanding and peace;
(p) reconcile the duty to protect and enhance everything connected with the cultural heritage, traditions and the past with the need to allow the endeavours of the present and the modern outlook to find expression;

q) 1. protect and enhance the heritage of the past, and particularly ancient monuments and traditions, which may contribute to the essential equilibrium of societies subject to a rapid process of industrialization and urbanization;

   II. make the public aware of the importance of town-planning and architecture, not only because they are the reflection of cultural and social life, but above all because they condition the very background to living;

   III. associate the population with the conservation and management of the natural environment both at the national and at the international levels, since the quality of the natural environment is essential to the full development of the human personality;

r) create, through the appropriate bodies, conditions making it possible for work and leisure, each in its own way, to offer opportunities for cultural creation to each and everyone, and lay down conditions governing working and leisure hours and the operational organization of cultural institutions, which will enable to greatest possible number of people to gain access to culture and participate in cultural life;

s) reject concepts, which, under the guise of cultural action, are based on violence and aggression, domination, contempt and racial prejudice, as well as on debasing ideas or practices;

t) strengthen their work in support of peace and international understanding, in accordance with the Declaration of the Principles of International Cultural Cooperation and encourage the dissemination of ideas and cultural goods conducive to the strengthening of peace, security and cooperation.

III. Technical, administrative, economic and financial measures

5. It is recommended to Member States, if they have not already done so, that they make the necessary technical, administrative and financial resources available to upgrade policies for cultural action from the insignificant position to which they may still be relegated until they reach an operationally effective level enabling them to achieve the goals of life-long education and cultural development and to ensure to the maximum that the people at large have access to culture and participate freely in cultural life. For this purpose Member States should take the following measures:
A. WAYS AND MEANS OF CULTURAL ACTION

Decentralization of facilities, activities and decisions

6. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:
   (a) foster decentralization of activities and encourage the development of local centres, special attention being paid to under-populated peripheral or under-privileged areas;
   (b) encourage, extend and strengthen the network of cultural and artistic institutions not only in large towns but also in smaller towns, villages and urban neighbourhoods;
   (c) encourage the setting up of facilities best suited to the needs of the users and foster the integration of facilities used for cultural activities with those which are designed for social and educational work and which should be mobile to some extent, in order to make available to the widest possible public all the means needed for the heightening of awareness and for cultural development;
   (d) encourage the use for cultural purposes of all public facilities that promote communication among groups and individuals;
   (e) encourage inter-regional and inter-community exchanges;
   (f) stimulate regional or local initiative, both by providing decision-makers with the necessary resources at appropriate levels and by sharing the decision-making function with the representatives of other parties interested in cultural problems; and to this end develop secondary centres for administrative decision-making;
   (g) develop methods for the promotion of artistic creation and cultural activity by the people at large, based upon the people's own organizations, in both residential areas and working places;
   (h) apply special measures for certain disadvantaged groups and for environments with a poorly developed cultural life. Special attention should be paid to e.g. children, the handicapped, people living in hospitals and prisons, and people living in remotely situated areas, as well as those in city slums. Decisions and responsibility should, as much as possible, be left with the group participating in the activities.

Concerted action

7. Member States or the appropriate authorities should encourage concerted action and cooperation both as regards the activities themselves and decision-making:
   (a) by paying special attention to creative cultural and artistic non-institutional and non-professional activities and by providing all possible support to amateur activities in all their diversity;
   (b) by establishing advisory structures, at the local, regional and national levels, bringing together representatives of the professional and social groups concerned who will participate in determining the objectives and ways and means of cultural action.
Trade unions and other workers’ organizations
8. Member States or the appropriate authorities should take all such measures as will be of assistance to socio-cultural organizations for the people at large, trade unions and other workers’ organizations for wage-earners or the self-employed (farmers, craftsmen, etc.), in freely carrying out their cultural policies or projects so as to enable them to enjoy the whole wealth of cultural values and to take an active part in the cultural life of society.

Animation
9. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:
(a) contribute to the training of cultural development personnel, in particular of “animateurs”, who should act as information, communication and expression intermediaries, by putting people in contact with each other and serving as a connecting link between the public; the work of art, and the artist, and between the public and cultural institutions;
(b) provide such personnel with means of action enabling them, on the one hand, to give support to the spontaneous “animateurs” of local communities and, on the other hand, to stimulate initiative and participation, using the necessary training methods;
(c) encourage the use of instruments and equipment for communication and expression, which have educational value and offer a potential for creation, by making them available to cultural centres and institutions such as public libraries, museums, etc.

Artistic creation
10. Member States or other appropriate authorities should:
(a) create social, economic and financial conditions, which should provide artists, writers and composers of music with the necessary basis for free creative work;
(b) define, for this purpose, in addition to the legal measures connected with copyright and the protection of works of art:
   I. social measures applying to all professional artists and fiscal measures designed to assist not only collective forms of artistic creation (theatre, cinema, etc.) but also individual artists;
   II. a policy of fellowships, prizes, State commissions, and the engagement of artists, particularly for the construction and decoration of public buildings;
   III. a policy for the dissemination of culture (exhibitions, performances of musical and theatrical works, etc.);
   IV. a research policy that offers individual artists, groups and institutions the possibility of carrying out experiments and research in multi-purpose workshops, without feeling obliged to produce successful results, in such a way as to foster an artistic and cultural renewal;
(c) consider establishing funds to provide aid for artistic creation;
(d) encourage the endeavours of all who have a vocation for artistic creation and help young people to develop their talents without any discrimination and strengthen specialized institutions providing professional training in all the arts;
(e) promote opportunities for the publication of high-quality reproductions of artistic works, the publication and translation of literary works and the publication and performance of musical compositions;
(f) associate artists at all levels in the formulation and implementation of cultural policies;
(g) ensure the multiplicity of bodies called upon to assess works of art and the regular renewal of their membership, as well as the multiplicity of sources of finance, so as to safeguard the freedom of creative artists;
(h) give technical, administrative and financial assistance to groups of amateur artists and support cooperation between non-professional and professional artists.

Cultural industries
11. Member States or the appropriate authorities should make sure that the criterion of profit-making does not exert a decisive influence on cultural activities, and, in drawing up cultural policies, provide for machinery for negotiating with private cultural industries, as well as for supplementary or alternative initiatives.

Dissemination
12. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:
(a) adopt a policy of granting subsidies and awarding prizes for cultural goods and services, and bring about conditions, which will ensure that they are disseminated and become accessible to the broadest possible social categories, particularly in cultural fields neglected by commercial enterprises;
(b) take steps by means of a policy of appropriate subsidies and contracts, to further the development of the activities of cultural associations at the national, regional and local levels;
(c) give prominence to a type of dissemination, which is conducive to an active frame of mind in the public rather than to passive consumption of cultural products.

Research
13. Member States or the appropriate authorities should foster cultural development research projects, which aim, inter alia, at evaluating current activities as well as stimulating new experiments and studying their impact on the widest possible audiences, with a view to the possible adoption of fresh measures in connexion with cultural policies.
B. POLICIES RELATED TO CULTURAL ACTION

Communication
14. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:
(a) promote all occasions for communication, such as meetings, debates, public performances, group activities, and festivals, for the purpose of encouraging dialogue and a continuous exchange of ideas between individuals, the public, creative artists, “animateurs” and producers;
(b) develop the opportunities for cultural contact and exchange provided by sports events, nature discovery expeditions, art and aesthetic education, current events and tourism;
(c) encourage the usual social intermediaries (communities, institutions, agencies, trade unions, and other groups) to promote information and free cultural expression for their members on the widest possible scale, in order to increase their awareness of and familiarize them with cultural activities;
(d) supply information that is apt to generate feedback and personal initiative;
(e) facilitate access to written works by arranging for mobile and flexible forms of dissemination, and provide for extension work in places such as libraries or reading rooms;
(f) promote extensive use of audio-visual media in order to bring the best of the culture of both past and present within the reach of large sectors of the population, including, where applicable, oral traditions, in the collection of which the media can assuredly assist;
(g) promote the active participation of audiences by enabling them to have a voice in the selection and production of programmes, by fostering the creation of a permanent flow of ideas between the public, artists and producers and by encouraging the establishment of production centres for use by audiences at local and community levels;
(h) encourage the communication media to increase the number and variety of their programmes in order to offer the widest range of choices, bearing in mind the extreme diversity of audiences, to enhance the cultural quality of programmes intended for the public at large, to select spoken and visual languages accessible to all audiences, to give preference to material, which serves the purposes of information and education rather than those of propaganda and publicity and to pay special attention to the protection of national cultures from potentially harmful influences of some types of mass production;
(i) promote comparative studies and research on the reciprocal influence as between the artist, the mass media and society and on the relationship between the production and impact of cultural programmes;
(j) provide, with a view to life-long education, an introduction to audio-visual languages as well as to choosing communication media and programmes with discrimination from an early age;
(k) develop, in a general way, forms of education and training, which are adapted to the special characteristics of audiences in order to make them capable of receiving, selecting and grasping the mass of information, which is put into circulation in modern societies.

Education

15. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:

(a) link cultural plans systematically with educational plans within the context of life-long education embracing the family, the school, community life, vocational training, continuing education and cultural activity;

(b) help people at large to gain access to knowledge, bearing in mind the need to create socio-economic conditions such as will allow them to participate in community life, and make whatever changes may be required in educational systems, content and methods;

(c) develop, in a systematic manner, cultural education and artistic training programmes at all levels by inviting contributions from artists and those responsible for cultural action.

Youth

16. Member States or the appropriate authorities should offer young people a wide range of cultural activities, which correspond to their needs and aspirations, encourage them to acquire a sense of social responsibility, awaken their interest in the cultural heritage of their own country and in that of all mankind and, with a view to cultural cooperation in a spirit of friendship, international understanding and peace, promote the ideals of humanism and respect for widely recognized educational and moral principles.

Environment

17. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:

(a) set up machinery for concerted action allowing the inhabitants or their representatives to be closely associated with the preparation and implementation of town-planning projects and changes to the architectural setting in which they live, and also with the safeguarding of historic quarters, towns and sites and their integration into a modern environment;

(b) take into consideration the international instruments adopted on such issues by intergovernmental organizations.

IV. Internacional cooperation

18. Member States or the appropriate authorities should:

(a) strengthen bilateral and multilateral, and regional and international cultural cooperation with due regard for the generally recognized principles of international law and the ideals and objectives of the United Nations, sovereignty and independence of States, mutual advantage, and the equality of cultures;

(b) inspire in the people at large respect for other peoples and a refusal to countenance acts of international violence and policies based on force, domination and aggression;

(c) encourage the circulation of ideas and cultural values conducive to better understanding among men;

(d) develop and diversify cultural exchanges with a view to promoting an ever deeper appreciation of the values of each culture and, in particular, draw attention to the cultures of the developing countries as a mark of esteem for their cultural identity;

(e) contribute actively to the implementation of cultural projects and to the production and dissemination of works created by common endeavours, and develop direct contacts and exchanges between institutions and persons active in the cultural field, as well as research on cultural development;

(f) encourage non-governmental organizations, socio-cultural organizations for the people at large, trade unions and social and occupational groups, women's associations, youth movements, co-operatives and other organizations (for instance, artists' associations) to participate in international cultural exchanges and their development;

(g) take account, in exchanges of persons, of the mutual enrichment resulting from cooperation between specialists from different countries;

(h) bear in mind that the need for introductory courses and information on culture is all the greater when the aim is to arouse interest in the civilizations and cultures of other nations in order to open men's minds to the recognition of the plurality and equality of cultures;

(i) ensure that the messages chosen are inserted or reinserted into a universal context so that opportunities for access to culture may have significance for the whole international community;

(j) take account of the important contribution that the press, books, audio-visual media, and in particular television, can make to the mutual understanding of nations and to their knowledge of the cultural achievements of other nations; encourage the use of communication media, including telecommunication satellites, to promote the ideals of peace, human rights and fundamental freedoms, friendship among men and international understanding and cooperation, and thus create the necessary conditions to enable their national cultures to resist ideas of hatred between peoples, war, force and racism, in view of their adverse consequences and their corruptive effect on young people;

(k) provide appropriate financial facilities for activities, which aim at promoting international exchanges and cultural cooperation.
V. Federal or confederate states

19. In the implementation of this Recommendation, Member States with a federal or confederate constitution shall not be bound to carry the provisions of the Recommendation into effect when competence for the latter is constitutionally vested in each of the constituent States, provinces or cantons; in such a case, the sole obligation of the federal or confederate government concerned shall be to inform the States, provinces or cantons of those provisions and to recommend their adoption.

The foregoing is the authentic text of the Recommendation duly adopted by the General Conference of the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization during its nineteenth session, which was held in Nairobi, and declared closed the thirtieth day of November 1976.

1.3. Recommendation concerning the status of the artist (1980)

The General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, meeting in Belgrade from the 23rd September to the 28th October 1980 at its twenty-first session,

Recalling that, under the terms of Article 1 of its Constitution, the purpose of the Organization is to contribute to peace and security by promoting collaboration among the nations through education, science and culture in order to further universal respect for justice, for the rule and for the human rights and fundamental freedoms, which are affirmed for the peoples of the world, without distinction of race, sex, language or religion, by the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the terms of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and particularly Articles 22, 23, 24, 25, 27 and 28 thereof, quoted in the annex to this Recommendation,

Recalling the terms of the United Nations International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, particularly its Articles 6 and 15, quoted in the annex to this Recommendation, and the need to adapt the necessary measures for the preservation, development and dissemination of culture, with a view to ensuring the full exercise of these rights,
Recalling the Declaration of the Principles of International Cultural Cooperation, adapted by the General Conference of UNESCO at its fourteenth session, particularly its Articles III and IV, which are quoted in the annex to this Recommendation, as well as the Recommendation on Participation by the People at Large in Cultural Life and their Contribution to it, adopted by the General Conference of UNESCO at its nineteenth session,

Recognizing that the arts in their fullest and broadest definition are and should be an integral part of life and that it is necessary and appropriate for governments to help create and sustain not only a climate encouraging freedom of artistic expression but also the material conditions facilitating the release of this creative talent,

Recognizing that every artist is entitled to benefit effectively from the social security and insurance provisions contained in the basic texts, Declarations, Covenant and Recommendation mentioned above,

Considering that the artist plays an important role in the life and evolution of society and that he should be given the opportunity to contribute to society’s development and, as any other citizen, to exercise his responsibilities therein, while preserving his creative inspiration and freedom of expression,

Further recognizing that the cultural, technological, economic, social and political development of society influences the status of the artist and that it is consequently necessary to review his status, taking account of social progress in the world,

Affirming the right of the artist to be considered, if he so wishes, as a person actively engaged in cultural work and consequently to benefit, taking account of the particular conditions of his artistic profession, from all the legal, social and economic advantages pertaining to the status of workers,

Affirming further the need to improve the social security, labour and tax conditions of the artist, whether employed or self-employed, taking into account the contribution to cultural development, which the artist makes,

Recalling the importance, universally acknowledged both nationally and internationally, of the preservation and promotion of cultural identity and of the role in this field of artists who perpetuate the practice of traditional arts and also interpret a nation’s folklore,

Recognizing that the vigour and vitality of the arts depend, inter alia, on the well-being of artists both individually and collectively,

Recalling the conventions and recommendations of the International Labour Organisation (ILO), which have recognized the rights of workers in general and, hence, the rights of artists and, in particular, the conventions and recommendations listed in the appendix to this Recommendation,

Taking note, however, that some of the International Labour Organisation standards allow for derogations or even expressly exclude artists, or certain categories of them, owing to the special conditions in which artistic activity takes place, and that it is consequently necessary to extend their field of application and to supplement them by other standards,

Considering further that this recognition of their status as persons actively engaged in cultural work should in no way compromise their freedom of creativity, expression and communication but should, on the contrary, confirm their dignity and integrity,

Convinced that action by the public authorities is becoming necessary and urgent in order to remedy the disquieting situation of artists in a large number of Member States, particularly with regard to human rights, economic and social circumstances and their conditions of employment, with a view to providing artists with the conditions necessary for the development and flowering of their talents and appropriate to the role that they are able to play in the planning and implementation of cultural policies and cultural development activities of communities and countries and in the improvement of the quality of life,

Considering that art plays an important part in education and that artists, by their works, may influence the conception of the world held by all people, and particularly by youth,

Considering that artists must be able collectively to consider and, if necessary, defend their common interests, and therefore must have the right to be recognized as a professional category and to constitute trade union or professional organizations,

Considering that the development of the arts, the esteem in which they are held and the promotion of arts education depend in large measure on the creativity of artists,

Aware of the complex nature of artistic activity and of the diverse forms it takes and, in particular, of the importance, for the living conditions and the development of the talents of artists, of the protection of their moral and material rights in their works, or performances, or the use made of them, and of the need to extend and reinforce such protection,

Considering the need to endeavour to take account as far as possible of the opinion both of artists and of the people at large in the formulation and implementation of cultural policies and for that purpose to provide them with the means for effective action,

Considering that contemporary artistic expression is presented in public places and that these should be laid out so as to take account of the opinions of the artists concerned,

Considering therefore that there should be close cooperation between architects, contractors and artists in order to lay down aesthetic guidelines for public places, which will respond to the requirements of communication and make an effective contribution to the establishment of new and meaningful relationships between the public and its environment,
Taking into account the diversity of circumstances of artists in different countries and within the communities in which they are expected to develop their talents, and the varying significance attributed to their works by the societies in which they are produced,

Convinced nevertheless, that despite such differences, questions of similar concern arise in all countries with regard to the status of the artist, and that a common will and inspiration are called for if a solution is to be found and if the status of the artist is to be improved, which is the intention of this Recommendation,

Taking note of the provisions of the international conventions in force relating, more particularly, to literary and artistic property, and in particular of the Universal Convention and the Bern Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, and of those relating to the protection of the rights of performers, of the resolutions of the General Conference, of the recommendations made by UNESCO’s intergovernmental conferences on cultural policies, and of the conventions and recommendations adopted by the International Labour Organisation, listed in the appendix to this Recommendation,

Having before it as item 31 of the agenda of the session, proposals concerning the status of the artist,

Having decided at its twentieth session, that this question should be the subject of a recommendation to Member States,

Adopts this Recommendation this twenty-seventh day of October 1980:

The General Conference recommends that Member States implement the following provisions, taking whatever legislative or other steps may be required—in conformity with the constitutional practice of each State and the nature of the questions under consideration—to apply the principles and norms set forth in this Recommendation within their respective territories.

For those States, which have a federal or non-unitary constitutional system, the General Conference recommends that, with regard to the provisions of this Recommendation the implementation of which comes under the legal jurisdiction of individual constituent States, countries, provinces, cantons or any other territorial and political subdivisions that are not obliged by the constitutional system of the federation to take legislative measures, the federal government be invited to inform the competent authorities of such States, countries, provinces or cantons of the said provisions, with its recommendation for their adoption.

The General Conference recommends that Member States bring this Recommendation to the attention of authorities, institutions and organizations in a position to contribute to improvement of the status of the artist and to foster the participation of artists in cultural life and development.

The General Conference recommends that Member States report to it, on dates and in a manner to be determined by it, on the action they have taken to give effect to this Recommendation.
I. Definitions
For the purposes of the present Recommendation,
1. “Artist” shall be understood as meaning any person who creates or participates in the interpretation of a creation or recreation of a work of art, who considers their artistic creation to be an essential feature of their life, who contributes towards the development of art and culture, and who is recognised or who wishes to be recognised as an artist, regardless of whether or not they maintain some form of working or associative relationship in this area.
2. The word “condition” shall designate, on the one hand, the place as recognised from a moral point of view of the aforementioned artists within society, in terms of the importance given to the role they should play, and, on the other hand, the liberties and rights, including those of a moral, economic and social nature, especially where income and social security are concerned, that the artist should enjoy.

II. Scope and field of application
The present Recommendation shall be applicable to all artists who fall within the aforementioned definition in Paragraph I.1, regardless of the artistic discipline or form that the artist might use. Amongst others, it includes all artistic creators and authors encompassed within the Universal Copyright Convention and the Berne Convention for the protection of literary and artistic works, as well as executors and interpreters defined in the Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organisations.

III. Guiding principles
1. The member States recognise that art reflects, conserves and enriches the cultural identity and spiritual heritage of a society, and constitutes a universal mode of expression and communication that serves to remind each individual of the sentiment of belonging to the human community in its most universal sense, regardless of ethnic, cultural and religious differences. As a consequence, and to this effect, the member States should guarantee that the people at large have access to art.
2. The member States should promote any activity that values the contribution made by artists to cultural development, above all those activities that are transmitted through the mass media and teaching, and the cultural use of leisure time.
3. The member States recognise the essential role of art in the life and development of the individual and society, and consequently should protect, defend and safeguard artists and their freedom of expression. To this end, they shall adopt any measure that might stimulate artistic creation and nurture talent, especially those activities that guarantee artists’ liberty, which is essential for them to fulfil their mission, and reinforce artists’ status by recognising their right to enjoy the benefits of their work. They shall endeavour by all means possible to increase artists’ participation in decisions concerning quality of life. The member States should make available all means at their disposal to demonstrate and confirm the role of artistic activities in the global development of nations, with the objective of constituting a more just and humane society, and thereby achieve a spiritually rich and peaceful life for all.

4. The member states should guarantee artists, as and when necessary, through adequate legislative and normative measures, the liberty and right to constitute any trade union and professional organisations as they might deem fit, as well as their right to affiliate to any organisation of this nature if this is their wish. They should also make it possible for any organisations that represent artists to participate in the drawing up of cultural and employment policies, including the professional training of artists and the determining of their working conditions.

5. The member States should, at all pertinent levels of national planning in general and cultural planning in particular, through close coordination of its cultural, educational and labour policies, adopt any means that are directed towards defining policies that materially and morally assist and support artists, and commit themselves to informing public opinion of the rightness and necessity of the aforementioned policy. To this end, education should play a role in awakening artistic sensitivity and in educating public opinion for the greater appreciation of artists’ output. Without prejudicing the rights that should be recognised in legislation concerning authors’ copyright, including work and employment rights, any efforts of this nature should permit those artists who so wish to fully devote themselves to artistic activity.

6. Given that freedom of expression and communication are an essential precondition of any artistic activity, the member States should ensure that artists enjoy all necessary protection provided by national and international legislation concerning human rights.

7. Considering the vital role that artistic creation and activity play in the cultural and global development of nations, the member States should promote conditions that are propitious to artists fully participating, either individually or as a member of a trade union or professional organisation, in the life of the community where they practice their vocation. They should involve artists in the preparation of local and national cultural policies, highlighting their important contribution within society itself and for the progress of humanity in general.

8. The member States should, by any means necessary, make it possible for any person, regardless of race, sex, language, creed, political opinion or any other social or national condition, to exercise their right to acquire the necessary education for the development and exercise of their artistic talent, to obtain employment and practice their profession without discrimination.

IV. The vocation and education of the artist

1. The member States should encourage, especially in schools and from an early age, measures destined for the appreciation of artistic creativity, and the discovery and affirmation of artistic vocation. However, they should not forget that to obtain results, the stimulus for artistic creativity requires that any talent should receive professional training so as to generate works of quality. To this end the member States should:

(a) Adopt all necessary measures available to guarantee an education that stimulates the manifestation of any talent or vocation.

(b) Adopt any useful measure, whenever possible, for the creation or development of teaching of specific artistic disciplines.

(c) Through incentives such as the provision of grant awards or pre-paid fees, to give artists the opportunity to modernise knowledge in their discipline or other related fields, to improve their technical skills, to establish contacts that favour creativity, and to retrain so as to gain access to other fields of artistic activity. The member States should provide adequate facilities for these ends and endeavour, whenever necessary, to improve and develop already existing facilities.

(e) Adopt and develop coordinated global policies and programs for professional guidance and training that cater for the specific circumstances of artists as regards employment, so that they may, when the case arises, gain access to other sectors.

(f) Promote the participation of artists in restoration, conservation and any other activities that make use of the cultural heritage in the widest sense of the term, and provide them with the necessary means to transmit to future generations the knowledge and artistic experience of which they are the trustees.

(g) Recognise the importance of traditional forms of transmitting knowledge and skills in arts or crafts education, and more specifically, of the educational systems used by different communities, and to adopt whatever measures are necessary to protect and encourage them.

(h) Recognise that arts education should not be separated from living art and guide this education so that cultural institutions such as theatres, plastic art workshops, radio and television studios, etc, play an important role in arts training and education.

(i) Pay special attention to the development of female creativity and favour groups and organisations whose objective is to promote the role of women in different areas of artistic activity.
(j) Recognise the international dimension of artistic life and artistic production, and so make available all necessary means to those who devote their time and effort to artistic output, and more specifically award travel and study grants that permit them to establish profound and living contact with other cultures.

(k) Adopt whatever measure that might favour the free international circulation of artists and provide them with the possibility of practising their art in any country they may choose, while also preventing the possibility of this being prejudicial for local artists and their working conditions and for the employment of local artists.

(l) Pay special attention to the needs of traditional artists, above all to enable them to travel both within and outside the frontiers of their country for the benefit of local traditions.

(m) Whenever possible, and without prejudicing the liberties and independence that should be enjoyed by artists and educators, the member States should initiate and support any efforts that make artists more aware of their community’s cultural identity, including traditional culture and folklore, thereby contributing to the reinforcement or rediscovery of the aforementioned cultural identity or cultures.

V. Social Status
The member States should promote and protect the status of the artist by favouring artistic activities, including innovation and research, as a service to society. They should guarantee the conditions necessary for respect and development of the artist’s work, and the economic guarantees to which the artist has a right as a cultural worker. The member States should:

1. Concede artists whatever public recognition may best suit their respective cultural means, and establish systems whereby prestige is given to those whose right it is when this prestige does not exist or where it is not adequately provided.

2. Make every effort so that artists may enjoy the rights and protection provided by national and international legislation concerning human rights.

3. Make every effort to adopt practicable measures so that artists may enjoy the rights provided by national and international legislation for any equivalent category of the working population in terms of employment, and living and working conditions. Likewise, they should make every effort to ensure that self employed artists enjoy protection in terms of income and social security, within reasonable limits.

4. Recognise the importance of international protection of artists’ rights under the conditions of existing conventions: more specifically, the Berne Convention for the protection of literary and artistic works, the Universal Copyright Convention and the Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organisations. They should also adopt any practicable measures that might broaden the range, reach and efficacy of the aforementioned conventions, and to study possibilities of enforcing the effect of these conventions in the case of states that do not adhere to them.

5. Recognise the right of professional organisations and artists’ trade unions to represent and defend the interests of their members, and offer them the possibility of consulting the public authorities about the necessary measures to stimulate artistic activity and guarantee its protection and development.

VI. Employment, working and living conditions of the artist, professional organisations and trade unions

1. Given that the member States are aware of the need to strengthen artists’ social prestige by providing adequate moral and material support to enable them to resolve their difficulties, they are invited to:

(a) Establish what support measures are necessary for artists at the commencement of their career, especially during the initial period when all their time is given over to their work.

(b) Encourage employment of artists in their discipline, devoting a part of the public budget to artistic works.

(c) Promote artistic activity within a developmental context, and stimulate public and private demand for the results of artistic activity with the objective of increasing paid employment for artists, especially through subsidies to arts institutions, loans for artists, organisation of arts events at a local, regional and national level, and the creation of arts funds.

(d) Determine which paid work can be offered to artists without this work undermining their creativity, vocation and freedom of expression and communication, permitting above all:

   (I) The integration of artists into the relevant areas of education and social services at local and national levels, and in centres such as libraries, museums, conservatories and other public institutions.

   (II) Greater participation of poets and writers in the general work of translating foreign literary works.

(e) Promote the development of necessary infrastructures (museums, concert halls, theatres or any other space) to favour the transmission of the arts and the meeting of artists with the public.

(f) Study the possibility of putting into practice, within the political or employment services framework, mechanisms that can help artists to find jobs, and the possibility of adhering to the Fee Charging Employment Agencies Convention (Revised) (No. 96), of the ILO, which is mentioned in the appendix of this Recommendation.

2. Within a general policy of stimulus of artistic creativity, cultural development and promotion and improvement of working conditions, and whenever possible, beneficial and in the interests of the artist, the member States are invited to:

(a) Encourage and facilitate the application of defined norms that benefit different sectors of the working population to artists, so as to guarantee that they benefit from all the rights awarded to equivalent groups where working conditions are concerned.

(b) Seek means to broaden legal protection for artists’ working conditions, as defined within the norms of the International Labour Organisation, and specifically in the area of relative norms concerning:
   (I) Working hours, weekly rest days and paid holidays, in all areas and activities, and especially for performers and interpreters, making the time spent in travel and repetition equivalent to public performance and representation.
   (II) Protection of life, health and the working environment.

(c) To consider the specific problems of artists and their place of work, ensuring that the architectural heritage and the quality of the environment are protected, as well as all norms concerning hygiene and safety when these are applied to the conditions of physical premises, if and when this is in the artist’s interest.

(d) In case of it not being possible to respect the norms concerning the questions mentioned in paragraph 2 (b) of this section, for reasons relating to the nature of the artistic activity in question or professional status, the member States should:
   (I) Determine, whenever necessary, what forms of adequate compensation in favour of the artist are available, preferably through consultation with organizations representing the artists and agents;

(e) Take into consideration the fact that systems of participation, such as differential salaries or shares in the profits of the production, may prejudice the artist’s rights where real income and social guarantees are concerned, and consequently adopt any opportune measures to preserve such rights.

3. Within the specific considerations for the case of child artists, the member States are invited to take into consideration the articles of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of the Child.

4. Recognising the role that professional and trade union organisations play in the defence of working conditions, the member States are invited to adopt adequate measures to:

(a) Respect and ensure that there is respect for regulations concerning trade union freedom, the right of association and collective bargaining that are stated in the international labour conventions that appear in the appendix of this Recommendation, and ensure that these regulations as well as the general principles governing them are applied to artists.
(b) Encourage the free creation of the aforementioned organisations in areas where they do not exist.
(c) Offer the possibility to all national and international artists’ organisations of fully carrying out their functions without prejudice to their rights or freedom of association.

5. The member States are invited to make efforts within their respective culturalambits to offer self-employed and wage-earning artists the same social protection as that normally given to wage-earning and self-employed workers in other categories. Measures should be taken to ensure that the families of the aforementioned artists receive wider social protection. The social security systems that the member States should adopt, improve or make complete should take into account the specific nature of the artistic activity, characterised by the intermittent nature of the work and the brusque variations in income of many artists, without this in any implying limitations on the liberty to create, publish and broadcast their work. In this context, the member States are invited to consider special financial measures for artists from the social security system, recurring if necessary to new forms of financial participation, regardless of whether the commercialisation or exploitation of services and work derives from public authorities or private enterprise.

6. Having generally recognised that national and international legislation has been slow to recognise the Artist’s status in the light of general technical progress, the rise of the mass media, mechanical reproduction of works of art, interpretations and performances, the education of the public and the decisive role of the cultural industries, the member States are thus invited, by whatever means necessary, to adopt the following measures to:
(a) Ensure that artists receive remuneration for the commercial distribution and exploitation of their work, and adopt measures so that artists maintain control over their works, especially in areas where there is risk of unauthorised exploitation, modification or distribution.
(b) Prepare, whenever possible, a system that guarantees the exclusive moral and material rights of artists in the case of possible prejudicial technical developments in new communication media, reproduction and the cultural industries. The requirement in this particular case is to establish rights for performers, including variety artists, circus performers and puppeteers. To this end, it would be necessary to take into account the statements of the Rome Convention, and in the case of problems deriving from the introduction of cable broadcasting and video recordings, the Recommendation adopted in 1979 by the inter-governmental Committee of the Rome Convention.
(c) Provide compensation for damages caused to artists as a consequence of the technical development of new communication media, reproduction and the cultural industries, for example by encouraging advertising, broadcasting their work and creating employment.

(d) Ensure that the cultural industries that profit from technological changes, especially radio and television broadcasting bodies and mechanical reproduction companies, participate in efforts to promote and stimulate artistic creation, especially through the creation of employment, advertising, broadcasting, copyright payment and any other means considered fair and just for artists.

(e) Help artists and artists’ organisations to reduce the effects of new technologies that might be prejudicial to employment or possible employment for artists.

7. Given that the member States are fully cognisant of the random nature of artistic remuneration and its brusque fluctuations, of the specific nature of artistic activity, and that in many artistic vocations the artist may only practice for a relatively brief period of his working life, the member States are invited to create the rights for certain categories of artists to receive a pension in terms of the length of their career and not in terms of their physical age, and to ensure that the fiscal system takes the particular conditions of the artist’s work and activity into account.

(a) To preserve the health and prolong the professional activity of certain categories of artists (such as members of a ballet company, dancers, singers), the member States are invited to create adequate health care systems, not only to assist in work related disability and illness, but also in areas of prevention and opportunities for research on specific health problems in the arts professions.

(b) Given that a work of art must not be regarded as a consumer good or as an investment, the member States are invited to make efforts to remove any indirect taxation that might affect the price of a work of art or an artistic performance at the time of its creation, broadcasting or first sale in the interest, above all, of the artist or for the development of the arts.

8. Given the growing importance of international exchanges of works of art and contacts between artists and the need to promote them, the member States are invited, either separately or as a whole, and without prejudicing the national culture, to:

(a) Guarantee greater freedom in the circulation of these works of art through the adoption, amongst other measures, of more flexible customs practices, and exemptions from customs duties, especially in the case of temporary importation.

(b) Adopt measures that encourage travel and international exchanges of artists, without neglecting the needs of national artists at any time.
VII. Cultural policies and participation

In accordance with paragraphs 111.7 and V.5 of the present Recommendation, the member States should make efforts to adopt adequate measures that take the opinion of artists, and the trade unions and professional organisations that represent them, along with the population as a whole, in accordance with the spirit of the UNESCO Recommendation concerning the participation and contribution of the people in cultural life, in the formulation and execution of its cultural policy. To this effect, they are invited to adopt measures so that artists and their organisations may participate in deliberations, decision making, and in the later application of these measures, the objectives of which shall be to:

(a) Improve the situation of the artist in society, by adopting all pertinent measures concerning working conditions and the life of the artist, and ensuring that public authorities provide moral and material support to artistic activities and the professional training of the artist.

(b) Promote culture and the arts in society, for example, through any measure taken to improve cultural development, protection and value of the cultural heritage (including folklore and other traditional artistic activities), cultural identity, certain aspects of environmental problems, and the use of leisure time, and the place of art and culture in education.

(c) Encourage international cultural cooperation, by adopting, for example, all opportune measures relating to the broadcasting and translation of works, the exchange of works and people, and the organisation of regional and international cultural events.

VIII. Utilisation and application of the present Recommendation

1. The member States should make efforts to amplify and complete their own measures concerning the condition of the artist, cooperating with all national and international bodies whose activities might be related to the objectives of the present Recommendation, and more specifically, with the national commissions of UNESCO and national and international artists’ organisations, the International Labour Office and the World Intellectual Property Organisation.

2. The member States should put means at the disposal of the aforementioned bodies representing artists to support their actions, and guarantee their professional cooperation so that artists may benefit from the articles of the present Recommendation and the recognition of their condition.

IX. Acquired profits

In cases where the artist enjoys, in certain areas, a more favourable condition than that given in the articles of the present Recommendation, the articles should not in any way, shape or form be applied so as to directly or indirectly prejudice the enjoyment of acquired profits.

F. Conventions on copyrights administered by United Nations Organisation for Health Science and Culture and the World Intellectual Property Organisation

1.4. Mexico city declaration on cultural policies, world conference on cultural policies (1982)

The world has undergone profound changes in recent years. The progress of science and technology has changed man's place in the world and the nature of his social relations. Education and culture, whose significance and scope have been considerably extended, are essential for the genuine development of the individual and society.

Despite today's increased opportunities for dialogue, the community of nations is also faced with serious economic difficulties, inequality between nations is growing, and many conflicts and grave tensions are threatening peace and security.

It is therefore now more urgent than ever to establish closer collaboration among nations, to guarantee respect for the rights of others and to ensure the exercise of the fundamental freedoms of man and of peoples, and of their right to self-determination. More than ever it is urgent to construct 'defences of peace' in the mind of each individual, inter alia through education, science and culture, as affirmed in the Constitution of UNESCO.
By gathering in Mexico City on the occasion of the World Conference on Cultural Policies, the international community has decided to contribute effectively to the closer communion of peoples and to greater understanding among men.

Therefore, expressing trust in the ultimate convergence of the cultural and spiritual goals of mankind, the Conference agrees:

• that in its widest sense, culture may now be said to be the whole complex of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features that characterize a society or social group. It includes not only the arts and letters, but also modes of life, the fundamental rights of the human being, value systems, traditions and beliefs;

• that it is culture that gives man the ability to reflect upon himself. It is culture that makes us specifically human, rational beings, endowed with a critical judgement and a sense of moral commitment. It is through culture that we discern values and make choices. It is through culture that man expresses himself, becomes aware of himself, recognizes his incompleteness, questions his own achievements, seeks untiringly for new meanings and creates works through which he transcends his limitations.

Consequently, the Conference solemnly agrees that the following principles should govern cultural policies:

Cultural identity

1. Every culture represents a unique and irreplaceable body of values since each people's traditions and forms of expression are its most effective means of demonstrating its presence in the world.

2. The assertion of cultural identity therefore contributes to the liberation of peoples. Conversely, any form of domination constitutes a denial or an impairment of that identity.

3. Cultural identity is a treasure that vitalizes mankind's possibilities of self-fulfilment by moving every people and every group to seek nurture in its past, to welcome contributions from outside that are compatible with its own characteristics, and so to continue the process of its own creation.

4. All cultures form part of the common heritage of mankind. The cultural identity of a people is renewed and enriched through contact with the traditions and values of others. Culture is dialogue, the exchange of ideas and experience and the appreciation of other values and traditions; it withers and dies in isolation.

5. The universal cannot be postulated in the abstract by any single culture: it emerges from the experience of all the world's peoples as each affirms its own identity. Cultural identity and cultural diversity are inseparable.
6. Special characteristics do not hinder, but rather enrich the communion of the universal values that unite peoples. Hence recognition of the presence of a variety of cultural identities wherever various traditions exist side by side constitutes the very essence of cultural pluralism.

7. The international community considers it its duty to ensure that the cultural identity of each people is preserved and protected.

8. All of this points to the need for cultural policies that will protect, stimulate and enrich each people’s identity and cultural heritage, and establish absolute respect for and appreciation of cultural minorities and the other cultures of the world. The neglect or destruction of the culture of any group is a loss to mankind as a whole.

9. The equality and dignity of all cultures must be recognized, as must the right of each people and cultural community to affirm and preserve its cultural identity and have it respected by others.

Cultural dimension of development

10. Culture constitutes a fundamental dimension of the development process and helps to strengthen the independence, sovereignty and identity of nations. Growth has frequently been conceived in quantitative terms, without taking into account its necessary qualitative dimension, namely the satisfaction of man’s spiritual and cultural aspirations. The aim of genuine development is the continuing well-being and fulfilment of each and every individual.

11. It is vital to humanize development, the ultimate goal of which is the individual in his dignity as a human being and his responsibility to society. Development implies for every individual and every people access to information and opportunities to learn and to communicate with others.

12. If all men and women are to be given the opportunity to improve their lot the course of development must be continually adjusted.

13. Steadily increasing numbers of men and women are seeking a better world. They do not only seek the satisfaction of basic needs but also the development of human beings, their well-being and their possibilities of living together in fellowship with all peoples. Their objective is not production, profit or consumption per se, but the full realization of their potential, both individual and collective, and the preservation of nature.

14. Man is the origin and the goal of development.

15. Any cultural policy should restore to development its profound, human significance. New models are required. And it is in the sphere of culture and education that they are to be found.

16. Balanced development can only be ensured by making cultural factors an integral part of the strategies designed to achieve it; consequently, these strategies should always be devised in the light of the historical, social and cultural context of each society.

Culture and democracy
17. Article 27 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaims that ‘everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits’. States must take the necessary steps to attain this objective.
18. Culture springs from the community as a whole and should return to it; neither the production of culture nor the enjoyment of its benefits should be the privilege of élites. Cultural democracy is based on the broadest possible participation by the individual and society in the creation of cultural goods, in decision-making concerning cultural life and in the dissemination and enjoyment of culture.
19. The aim, above all, should be to open up new channels for democracy through equality of opportunity in education and culture.
20. It is necessary to bring about a geographical and administrative decentralization of cultural life and ensure that the institutions responsible for cultural action are more fully aware of the preferences, options and needs of society in cultural matters. It is essential, therefore, that more opportunities should be provided for contact between the public and cultural bodies.
21. A programme for the democratization of culture calls, in the first place, for the decentralization of access to leisure pursuits and the arts. A democratic cultural policy will provide for enjoyment of artistic excellence by all communities and the whole population.
22. The participation of all individuals in cultural life requires the elimination of inequalities based, inter alia, on social background and status, education, nationality, age, language, sex, religious beliefs, health or the fact of belonging to ethnic, minority or fringe groups.

Cultural heritage
23. The cultural heritage of a people includes the works of its artists, architects, musicians, writers and scientists and also the work of anonymous artists, expressions of the people’s spirituality, and the body of values, which give meaning to life. It includes both tangible and intangible works through which the creativity of that people finds expression: languages, rites, beliefs, historic places and monuments, literature, works of art, archives and libraries.
24. Every person therefore has a right and a duty to defend and preserve its cultural heritage, since societies recognize themselves through the values in which they find a source of creative inspiration.
25. The cultural heritage has frequently suffered damage or destruction as a result of thoughtlessness as well as of the processes of urbanization, industrialization and technological penetration. But even more intolerable is the damage caused to the cultural heritage by colonialism, armed conflict, foreign occupation and the imposition of alien values. All these have the effect of severing a people’s links with and obliterating the memory of its past. Preservation and appreciation of its cultural heritage therefore enable a people to defend its sovereignty and independence, and hence affirm and promote its cultural identity.

26. The restitution to their countries of origin of works illicitly removed from them is a basic principle of cultural relations between peoples. Existing international instruments, agreements and resolutions could be strengthened to increase their effectiveness in this respect.

Artistic and intellectual creation and zart education

27. The flowering of culture is inseparable both from the independence of peoples and from individual freedom. Freedom of opinion and expression is essential for the creative activities of artists and intellectuals alike.

28. Social and cultural conditions must be established, which will facilitate, stimulate and guarantee artistic and intellectual creation without political, ideological, economic or social discrimination.

29. The development and promotion of art education imply not only the formulation of specific programmes designed to foster artistic appreciation and support groups or institutions engaged in creation and dissemination, but also the encouragement of activities that will stimulate public awareness of the social importance of art and intellectual creation.

Relationship of culture with education, science and communication

30. The overall development of society calls for complementary policies in the fields of culture, education, science and communication with a view to the establishment of a harmonious balance between technological progress and the intellectual and moral advancement of mankind.

31. Education is ideally suited to the transmission of national and universal cultural values and should foster the assimilation of scientific and technological knowledge without detriment to each people’s capacities and values.

32. At the present time, integral, innovative education is required that not only informs and transmits, but also trains and renews; that helps students to become aware of the realities of their times and of their environment, that assists in the full development of the personality; that provides training in self-discipline, respect for others, and social and international solidarity; that equips people for organization and productivity and for the production of truly necessary goods and services; and finally, that encourages renovation and stimulates creativity.

33. It is necessary to encourage the use of national languages to communicate knowledge.

34. Literacy is an essential condition for each people’s cultural development.

35. Science and technology teaching should be conceived above all as a cultural process, which develops critical awareness, and should be made an integral part of education systems in accordance with the development needs of peoples.

36. A free flow and a wider and more balanced dissemination of information, ideas and knowledge, which are among the principles of a new world information and communication order, imply for all nations the right not only to receive but also to transmit cultural, educational, scientific and technical information.

37. The modern communication media should facilitate objective information on cultural trends in the various countries, without detriment to the freedom of creativity and cultural identity of nations.

38. The technological progress of the last few years has led to the expansion of cultural industries. Whatever their mode of organization, these industries play an important role in the distribution of cultural goods. However, in their international activities they often disregard the traditional values of society and kindle hopes and aspirations, which are not in keeping with the actual needs of its development. Furthermore, the absence of national cultural industries may, particularly in developing countries, constitute a source of cultural dependence and give rise to alienation.

39. It is consequently essential to encourage the establishment of cultural industries in countries where they do not exist, through bilateral and multilateral assistance programmes, always ensuring that the production and distribution of cultural goods is in keeping with the integrated development of each society.

40. The modern communication media are now fulfilling a basic role in education and the spreading of culture. Society therefore has to find ways and means of using new production and communication technologies to achieve genuine individual and collective development and to promote the independence of nations by preserving their sovereignty and strengthening peace in the world.

Planning, administration and financing of cultural activities

41. Culture is the essential condition for genuine development. Society must make substantial efforts with respect to the planning, administration and financing of cultural activities. For this purpose account must be taken of the needs and problems of each society, always guaranteeing the freedom necessary for cultural creation, as regards both its spirit and its content.
42. If cultural development in the Member States is to be effective, the corresponding budget allocations must be increased and funds from a variety of sources must be employed as far as possible. Similarly, more must be done to train staff in the fields of cultural planning and administration.

International cultural cooperation

43. The widest possible dissemination of ideas and knowledge on the basis of cultural exchanges and encounters is essential to man’s creative activity and to the full development of the individual and of society.

44. More extensive subregional, regional, interregional and international cooperation and understanding in cultural matters are pre-conditions for the achievement of a climate of respect, confidence, dialogue and peace among the nations. Such a climate cannot be fully achieved without reducing and eliminating current tensions and conflicts and without halting the arms race and achieving disarmament.

46. International cultural cooperation must be based on respect for cultural identity, recognition of the dignity and value of all cultures, national independence and sovereignty, and non-intervention. Consequently, in co-operative relations between nations, all forms of subordination or the replacement of one culture by another should be avoided. It is also essential to rebalance cultural interchange and cooperation in order that the less-known cultures, particularly those of certain developing countries, may be more broadly disseminated in all countries.

47. Cultural, scientific and educational exchanges should strengthen peace, promote respect for human rights, and help to eradicate colonialism, neo-colonialism, racism, apartheid and all forms of aggression, domination and interference. Similarly, cultural cooperation should help to create an international climate conducive to disarmament, so that the human resources and huge sums allocated to armaments can be used for constructive purposes, such as programmes of cultural, scientific and technological development.

48. International cultural cooperation needs to be diversified and fostered in an interdisciplinary context and with special attention to the training of qualified staff for cultural services.

49. Encouragement should be given, in particular, to cooperation among developing countries, so that knowledge of other cultures and of other experiences of development may enrich the lives of such countries.
50. The Conference reaffirms that educational and cultural factors are essential in efforts to establish a new international economic order.

UNESCO
51. In a world torn by dissensions, which imperil the cultural values of the different civilizations, the Member States and Secretariat of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization must increase their efforts to preserve such values and take more intensive action to further the development of mankind. The establishment of a lasting peace is essential to the very existence of human culture.

52. In this situation, the goals of UNESCO, as set out in its Constitution, acquire a capital importance.

53. The World Conference on Cultural Policies appeals to UNESCO to continue and strengthen its work to increase cultural contacts between peoples and nations and continue to pursue its lofty mission of helping men, despite their diversity, to make the ancient dream of universal brotherhood come true.

54. The international community, meeting in this Conference, endorses the motto of Benito Juárez: ‘In relations between individuals as between nations, peace means respect for others’ rights’.

1.5. Stockholm action plan on cultural policies for development (1998)

The Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies for Development, held at Stockholm (from the 30th March to the 2nd April 1998),

1. Reaffirming the fundamental principles of the Final Declaration adopted by the World Conference on Cultural Policies in Mexico on 6 August 1982, entitled the Mexico City Declaration on Cultural Policies, which stresses “that in its widest sense, culture may now be said to be the whole complex of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features that characterize a society or social group. It includes not only the arts and letters, but also modes of life, the fundamental rights of the human being, value systems, traditions and beliefs”;

2. Recalling that the World Decade for Cultural Development stressed the importance of acknowledging the cultural dimension of development;
asserting and enhancing cultural identities; broadening participation in cultural life; and promoting international cultural cooperation;

3. Conscious of the efforts needed to face the challenges of cultural development and preservation of the diversity of cultures, as expressed in “Our Creative Diversity”, the Report of the World Commission on Culture and Development;

4. Emphasizing the need to take account of universal values while recognizing cultural diversity, the importance of national measures to harmonize national cultural policies and the need to preserve the pluralism of grassroots cultural initiatives in order to promote mutual understanding as well as respect and consideration between individuals and nations in view of the risk of disagreements and conflicts;

5. Recognizing that in a democratic framework civil society will become increasingly important in the field of culture;

6. Considering that one of the functions of cultural policies is to ensure sufficient scope for the flourishing of creative capacities;

7. Having regard to the ever more rapid processes of socio-economic, technological and cultural change, and the growing disparities at the national and international level, as well as the importance of respecting copyright and intellectual property in view of the risks and challenges arising from the promotion of cultural industries and trade in cultural products;

8. Considering that the activities of UNESCO, as well as the development policies of Member States, should take into account the role of cultural factors;

9. Taking note of the Declaration of the Conference of Ministers of Culture of the Non-Aligned Movement held at Medellin, Colombia, from the 3rd to the 5th September 1997 and the Conclusions of the Panafriican Consultation on Cultural Policies for Development held at Lomé, Togo, from 10 to 13 February 1998, the meeting of ALECSO in Tunis in February 1998, the report entitled “In from the Margins” prepared under the auspices of the Council of Europe, and the “Pro Cultura” Charter adopted at Thessaloniki (June 1997);

Recognizes the following principles:

1. Sustainable development and the flourishing of culture are interdependent.

2. One of the chief aims of human development is the social and cultural fulfilment of the individual.

3. Access to and participation in cultural life being a fundamental right of individuals in all communities, governments have a duty to create conditions for the full exercise of this right in accordance with Article 27 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

4. The essential aims of cultural policy are to establish objectives, create structures and secure adequate resources in order to create an environment conducive to human fulfilment.
5. The dialogue between cultures appears to be one of the fundamental cultural and political challenges for the world today; it is an essential condition of peaceful coexistence.

6. Cultural creativity is the source of human progress; and cultural diversity, being a treasure of humankind, is an essential factor of development.

7. New trends, particularly globalization, link cultures ever more closely and enrich the interaction between them, but they may also be detrimental to our creative diversity and to cultural pluralism; they make mutual respect all the more imperative.

8. Harmony between culture and development, respect for cultural identities, tolerance for cultural differences in a framework of plural democratic values, socio-economic equity and respect for territorial unity and national sovereignty are among the preconditions for a lasting and just peace.

9. Acceptance of cultural diversity helps to highlight and strengthen intercommunity links rooted in values that can be shared by all the different socio-cultural components of national society.

10. Creativity in societies favours creation, which stems above all from an individual commitment. This commitment is essential to building our future heritage. It is important to preserve and promote the conditions for such creation - in particular the freedom of the creative artist - within every community.

11. The defence of local and regional cultures threatened by cultures with a global reach must not transform the cultures thus affected into relics deprived of their own development dynamics.

12. We must therefore empower all people and communities to harness their creativity and to consolidate and forge ways of living together with others, facilitating genuine human development and the transition to a culture of peace and non-violence.

The Conference in consequence affirms that:

1. Cultural policy, as one of the main components of endogenous and sustainable development policy, should be implemented in co-ordination with policy in other social areas, on the basis of an integrated approach. Any policy for development must be profoundly sensitive to culture itself.

2. The dialogue between cultures should constitute a fundamental aim of cultural policies and the institutions, which embody them at the national and international level; universal freedom of expression is vital for this interaction and for effective participation in cultural life.

3. Cultural policies for the coming century must be anticipatory, responding to persistent problems as well as to new needs.

4. Effective participation in the information society and the mastery by everyone of information and communications technology constitute a significant dimension of any cultural policy.
5. Cultural policies should promote creativity in all its forms, facilitating access to cultural practices and experiences for all citizens regardless of nationality, race, sex, age, physical or mental disability, enrich the sense of cultural identity and belonging of every individual and community and sustain them in their search for a dignified and safe future.

6. Cultural policies should aim to create a sense of the nation as a multifaceted community within the framework of national unity - a community rooted in values that can be shared by all men and women and give access, space and voice to all its members.

7. Cultural policies should also aim to improve social integration and the quality of life of all members of society without discrimination.

8. Cultural policies must respect gender equality, fully recognizing women's parity of rights and freedom of expression and ensuring their access to decision-making positions.

9. Government should endeavour to achieve closer partnerships with civil society in the design and implementation of cultural policies that are integrated into development strategies.

10. In an increasingly interdependent world, the renewal of cultural policies should be envisioned simultaneously at the local, national, regional and global levels.

11. Countries should work together to build a world of intercultural communication, information and understanding, in which the diversity of cultural values, ethics and behaviours fosters a genuine culture of peace.

12. Cultural policies should place particular emphasis on promoting and strengthening ways and means of providing broader access to culture for all sectors of the population, combating exclusion and marginalization, and fostering all processes that favour cultural democratization.

13. Cultural policies should recognize the essential contribution that is made by creators to improving the quality of life, to promoting identity and to the cultural development of society.

14. Any cultural policy should take into account all the elements that shape cultural life: creation, preservation of the heritage and dissemination. A balance should be struck between these factors in order to implement an effective cultural policy, but promoting access to culture and its dissemination is impossible without maintaining a creative dynamic safeguarded by effective legislative protection.

Policy objectives recommended to member states
On the basis of the preceding principles, the Conference recommends that States adopt the following five policy objectives:
Objective 1: To make cultural policy one of the key components of development strategy

1. Design and establish cultural policies or review existing ones in such a way that they become one of the key components of endogenous and sustainable development.
2. Promote to this end the integration of cultural policies into development policies, in particular as regards their interaction with social and economic policies.
3. Contribute to the elaboration by UNESCO of guidelines for the development of an international research and training agenda with regard to culture and development.
4. Adopt and put into practice a broader vision of national cultural policy in accordance with the actual conditions in each country, and endeavour to encourage the participation of civil society, including the media.
5. Ensure the full involvement of creators and their professional organizations in the realization of this new vision.
6. Encourage the development and improvement of procedures conducive to cross-sectoral co-ordination of cultural policies.
7. Co-operate internationally and regionally in engaging in cultural activities to tackle the challenges of urbanization, globalization and ongoing technological changes.
8. Promote activities designed to raise the awareness of the population and decision-making bodies to the importance of taking into account cultural factors in the process of sustainable development.
9. Promote exchange and dialogue between individuals, the community and countries on the basis of shared values.
10. Endeavour to obtain, where necessary in cooperation with UNESCO, the recognition of the cultural dimension in the next International Development Strategy and to stimulate debate in both the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) and the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Objective 2: Promote creativity and participation in cultural life

1. Continue to treat the different components of the nation with the same respect and offer them equal opportunities to flourish, placing the emphasis on local initiatives, which reflect the diversity of cultural profiles.
2. Ensure through cultural and urban cultural policies the development of a local, creative and participatory cultural life and pluralistic management of diversity.
3. Promote knowledge and understanding of cultural and linguistic diversity by strengthening the cultural content of formal and non-formal education, in particular by encouraging the learning of one or more foreign languages.
4. Promote new links between culture and the education system so as to ensure full recognition of culture and the arts as a fundamental dimension of education for all, develop artistic education and stimulate creativity in education programmes at all levels.

5. Recognize the need to give particular attention to the implementation of existing international human rights instruments such as the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Vienna Declaration on Human Rights and make an inventory of cultural rights by evaluating existing instruments, which relate to cultural rights.

6. Further cultural policies, programmes, institutions and projects in order to ensure the full participation on equal terms of all individuals in society.

7. Pay greater attention to the role of culture in social transformation processes.

8. Give recognition to women's achievements in culture and development and ensure their participation in the formulation and implementation of cultural policies at all levels.

9. Review all cultural policies, programmes and institutions in order to ensure in particular respect for the rights of the child, as well as those of vulnerable groups with special educational and cultural needs; take into account the needs and aspirations of the young - whose new cultural practices in particular should be supported - as well as the elderly who are all too often left out of cultural life.

10. Allocate appropriate resources to education, cultural research and information necessary for devising and implementing cultural policies.

Objective 3: Reinforce policy and practice to safeguard and enhance the cultural heritage, tangible and intangible, moveable and immoveable, and to promote cultural industries

1. Renew and reinforce national commitments to applying UNESCO’s Conventions and Recommendations on the conservation of the moveable and immoveable heritage, on the safeguarding of traditional and popular culture, and on the status of the artist and linked issues.

2. Strengthen efficiency in the cultural sector through training schemes for national specialists and cultural administrators and managers, and provide equal opportunities for women in these fields.

3. Renew the traditional definition of heritage, which today must be understood as all natural and cultural elements, tangible or intangible, which are inherited or newly created. Through these elements social groups recognize their identity and commit themselves to pass it on to future generations in a better and enriched form.

4. Acknowledge the emergence of new categories in the area of cultural heritage, such as the cultural landscape, the industrial heritage and cultural tourism.

5. Strengthen the study, inventory, registration and cataloguing of heritage, including oral traditions, so as to permit the design of adequate and effective instruments for the implementation of traditional as well as scientific conservation policies.
6. Encourage through all possible legal and diplomatic means the return and/or restitution of cultural property to its countries of origin.
7. Include and ensure the protection of buildings, sites, ensembles and landscapes of cultural value in urban and regional development plans, programmes and policies.
8. Directly involve citizens and local communities in heritage conservation programmes and establish a list of best practices for heritage policies.
9. Ensure that tourism is respectful of cultures and of the environment and that the income it generates is also used for equitably preserving heritage resources and for strengthening cultural development.
10. Give priority to the creation of a network at the national, regional and international level involving artists and administrators of projects and cultural amenities in order to improve access to culture in both quantitative and qualitative terms.
11. Assist artists, designers and craftspeople by clarifying, safeguarding and improving the rights of creators and consolidate these rights in relation to the market, both locally and worldwide, by preventing commercial abuses.
12. Promote the idea that cultural goods and services should be fully recognized and treated as being not like other forms of merchandise.
13. Intensify cooperation between government, the business sector and other civil society organizations in the field of culture by providing the latter with appropriate regulatory frameworks.
14. Prevent illicit traffic in cultural property on a worldwide basis and in particular the acquisition of unprovenanced objects by museums and private collectors.

Objective 4: Promote cultural and linguistic diversity in and for the information society
1. Provide communication networks, including radio, television and information technologies, which serve the cultural and educational needs of the public; encourage the commitment of radio, television, the press and the other media to cultural development issues, such as the promotion of local, regional and national cultures and languages, exploration and preservation of the national heritage and promotion of the diversity of cultural traditions and indigenous and national cultural identities, while guaranteeing the editorial independence of the public service media.
2. Consider providing public radio and television and promote space for community, linguistic and minority services, particularly at the local level and with a view to promoting non-violence.
3. Adopt or reinforce national efforts that foster media pluralism and freedom of expression.

4. Take measures to promote the education and training of children in the use of new media technologies and to combat violence and intolerance, by contributing in particular to the activities of centres or institutions specializing in exchanges of information on children and violence on the screen.

5. Promote the development and use of new technologies and new communication and information services, stress the importance of access to information highways and services at affordable prices and the equal use of languages, and encourage the use of new technologies in public services.

6. Promote in addition education conducive to the mastery and creative use of new information technologies among the younger generations as users and producers of messages and content, and give priority to education in civic values and the training of teachers in new technologies.

7. Elaborate policies for the preservation and development of archives, museums, libraries and other information generated and/or collected by governmental and non-governmental institutions, when possible by digitalization, and establish mechanisms to facilitate access to that content, including the promotion of these institutions as centres for information, education and lifelong learning.

8. Promote knowledge of the cultural and natural heritage by the virtual means provided by the new technologies.

9. Recognize the significance of the new media technologies for the work of creative people as well as the key role of artistic creation in building the information society.

10. Co-operate in the domain of audiovisual media, particularly as regards training, and the development and distribution of audiovisual productions.

11. Encourage cultural cooperation, particularly through joint projects in the field of cultural industries (production, investment and transfer of rights).

12. Encourage research on the relationship between culture and its dissemination in the media and through new communication services, and support efforts to co-ordinate, and possibly harmonize, methods of measurement and evaluation of cultural programming in the media.

Objective 5: Make more human and financial resources available for cultural development

1. Seek to maintain or increase investment at the national level in cultural development and commit, where appropriate, a certain percentage of the government budget for this purpose, in accordance with overall development objectives, priorities and plans.
2. Invite local authorities to commit more funds to cultural activities and encourage them to strengthen their role in the field of cultural development.
3. Devise and develop fiscal frameworks for cultural activities in order to promote business support for cultural development, and elaborate mechanisms such as public endowments and revenue-earning projects by cultural institutions and the tourism and sports sectors.
4. Examine all appropriate measures to ensure that government policies take into account their effect or likely effect on the process of cultural development of another country.
5. Invite the United Nations’ funds and programmes, in particular the UNDP, the specialized financial institutions and the national and regional financing bodies to increase the financial assistance they provide for development projects with a significant cultural component.

Recommendations to the director-general of UNESCO

The Conference recommends the following lines of action to the Director-General of UNESCO:

1. Take the present Action Plan into account when preparing UNESCO’s future programme.
2. Elaborate a comprehensive strategy for practical follow-up to this Conference including the possibility or not of organizing a World Summit on Culture and Development, with a view to submitting the question to the Executive Board.
3. Encourage the establishment of networks for research and information on cultural policies for development, including study of the establishment of an observatory of cultural policies.
4. Bring the present Action Plan to the attention of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and through him to the General Assembly, with a view to submitting a report on the results of the present Conference to the latter at its 53rd session, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 52/197.
5. Communicate the present Action Plan to the Heads of all the Specialized Agencies of the United Nations system, to other intergovernmental organizations, both international and regional, with a view to seeking the inclusion of cultural policy objectives in all their development programmes and activities, in consultation with Member States and with their approval.
6. Pursue the goal of obtaining the integration of a cultural perspective into the next International Development Strategy and invite the Specialized Agencies to evaluate their development practices and policies in this perspective.
7. Propose to the Executive Board a set of projects promoting reflection, exchanges of experience and the development of joint projects designed to promote cultural policies with a view to sustainable human development.

8. Suggest to the Secretary-General of the United Nations that one year of the Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) be devoted to the connections between culture and development and the elimination of poverty.

9. UNESCO should, in the light of the results of the Earth Summit, the Earth Summit+5 and the Habitat II Conference, develop mechanisms in order to emphasize the vital place of the cultural heritage in the environment and as an important factor for sustainable development.

10. Encourage Member States to lodge with UNESCO their cultural strategies, with a view to furthering exchanges of information, ideas and practices.

11. Elaborate policies, design programmes and allocate and raise extra budgetary funds with a view to intensifying multilateral cultural cooperation for the improvement of research in the area of international cooperation in and for cultural policies and development.

12. Explore ways of further developing cooperation between UNESCO and other international organizations.

13. Pursue the publication by UNESCO of a biennial World Culture Report.

14. Promote the creation of an observatory of linguistic policies

1.6. UNESCO universal declaration on cultural diversity (2001)

París, Novembre 2001, The General Conference,

Committed to the full implementation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other universally recognized legal instruments, such as the two International Covenants of 1966 relating respectively to civil and political rights and to economic, social and cultural rights,

Recalling that the Preamble to the Constitution of UNESCO affirms “that the wide diffusion of culture, and the education of humanity for justice and liberty and peace are indispensable to the dignity of man and constitute a sacred duty, which all the nations must fulfil in a spirit of mutual assistance and concern”,
Further recalling Article I of the Constitution, which assigns to UNESCO among other purposes that of recommending “such international agreements as may be necessary to promote the free flow of ideas by word and image”,

Referring to the provisions relating to cultural diversity and the exercise of cultural rights in the international instruments enacted by UNESCO,

Reaffirming that culture should be regarded as the set of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features of society or a social group, and that it encompasses, in addition to art and literature, lifestyles, ways of living together, value systems, traditions and beliefs,

Noting that culture is at the heart of contemporary debates about identity, social cohesion, and the development of a knowledge-based economy,

Affirming that respect for the diversity of cultures, tolerance, dialogue and cooperation, in a climate of mutual trust and understanding are among the best guarantees of international peace and security,

Aspiring to greater solidarity on the basis of recognition of cultural diversity, of awareness of the unity of humankind, and of the development of intercultural exchanges,

Considering that the process of globalization, facilitated by the rapid development of new information and communication technologies, though representing a challenge for cultural diversity, creates the conditions for renewed dialogue among cultures and civilizations,

Aware of the specific mandate, which has been entrusted to UNESCO, within the United Nations system, to ensure the preservation and promotion of the fruitful diversity of cultures,

Proclaims the following principles and adopts the present Declaration:

Identity, diversity and pluralism

Article 1—Cultural diversity: the common heritage of humanity
Culture takes diverse forms across time and space. This diversity is embodied in the uniqueness and plurality of the identities of the groups and societies making up humankind. As a source of exchange, innovation and creativity, cultural diversity is as necessary for humankind as biodiversity is for nature. In this sense, it is the common heritage of humanity and should be recognized and affirmed for the benefit of present and future generations.

Article 2—From cultural diversity to cultural pluralism
In our increasingly diverse societies, it is essential to ensure harmonious interaction among people and groups with plural, varied and dynamic cultural identities as well as their willingness to live together. Policies for the inclusion and participation of all citizens are guarantees of social cohesion, the vitality of civil society and peace. Thus defined, cultural pluralism gives policy expression to the reality of cultural diversity. Indissociable from a democratic framework, cultural pluralism is conducive to cultural exchange and to the flourishing of creative capacities that sustain public life.

Article 3—Cultural diversity as a factor in development
Cultural diversity widens the range of options open to everyone; it is one of the roots of development, understood not simply in terms of economic growth, but also as a means to achieve a more satisfactory intellectual, emotional, moral and spiritual existence.

Cultural diversity and human rights

Article 4—Human rights as guarantees of cultural diversity
The defence of cultural diversity is an ethical imperative, inseparable from respect for human dignity. It implies a commitment to human rights and fundamental freedoms, in particular the rights of persons belonging to minorities and those of indigenous peoples. No one may invoke cultural diversity to infringe upon human rights guaranteed by international law, nor to limit their scope.

Article 5—Cultural rights as an enabling environment for cultural diversity
Cultural rights are an integral part of human rights, which are universal, indivisible and interdependent. The flourishing of creative diversity requires the full implementation of cultural rights as defined in Article 27 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in Articles 13 and 15 of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. All persons have therefore the right to express themselves and to create and disseminate their work in the language of their choice, and particularly in their mother tongue; all persons are entitled to quality education and training that fully respect their cultural identity; and all persons have the right to participate in the cultural life of their choice and conduct their own cultural practices, subject to respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Article 6—Towards access for all to cultural diversity
While ensuring the free flow of ideas by word and image care should be exercised so that all cultures can express themselves and make themselves known. Freedom of expression, media pluralism, multilingualism, equal access to art and to scientific and technological knowledge, including in digital form, and the possibility for all cultures to have access to the means of expression and dissemination are the guarantees of cultural diversity.
Cultural diversity and creativity

Article 7–Cultural heritage as the wellspring of creativity
Creation draws on the roots of cultural tradition, but flourishes in contact with other cultures. For this reason, heritage in all its forms must be preserved, enhanced and handed on to future generations as a record of human experience and aspirations, so as to foster creativity in all its diversity and to inspire genuine dialogue among cultures.

Article 8–Cultural goods and services: commodities of a unique kind
In the face of present-day economic and technological change, opening up vast prospects for creation and innovation, particular attention must be paid to the diversity of the supply of creative work, to due recognition of the rights of authors and artists and to the specificity of cultural goods and services, which, as vectors of identity, values and meaning, must not be treated as mere commodities or consumer goods.

Article 9–Cultural policies as catalysts of creativity
While ensuring the free circulation of ideas and works, cultural policies must create conditions conducive to the production and dissemination of diversified cultural goods and services through cultural industries that have the means to assert themselves at the local and global level. It is for each State, with due regard to its international obligations, to define its cultural policy and to implement it through the means it considers fit, whether by operational support or appropriate regulations.

Cultural diversity and international solidarity

Article 10–Strengthening capacities for creation and dissemination worldwide
In the face of current imbalances in flows and exchanges of cultural goods at the global level, it is necessary to reinforce international cooperation and solidarity aimed at enabling all countries, especially developing countries and countries in transition, to establish cultural industries that are viable and competitive at national and international level.

Article 11–Building partnerships between the public sector, the private sector and civil society
Market forces alone cannot guarantee the preservation and promotion of cultural diversity, which is the key to sustainable human development. From this perspective, the pre-eminence of public policy, in partnership with the private sector and civil society, must be reaffirmed.
Article 12—The role of UNESCO

UNESCO, by virtue of its mandate and functions, has the responsibility to:
(a) promote the incorporation of the principles set out in the present Declaration into the development strategies drawn up within the various intergovernmental bodies;
(b) serve as a reference point and a forum where States, international governmental and nongovernmental organizations, civil society and the private sector may join together in elaborating concepts, objectives and policies in favour of cultural diversity;
(c) pursue its activities in standard-setting, awareness raising and capacity-building in the areas related to the present Declaration within its fields of competence;
(d) facilitate the implementation of the Action Plan, the main lines of which are appended to the present Declaration.

Main lines of an action plan for the implementation of the UNESCO universal declaration on cultural diversity

The Member States commit themselves to taking appropriate steps to disseminate widely the “UNESCO Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity” and to encourage its effective application, in particular by cooperating with a view to achieving the following objectives:
1. Deepening the international debate on questions relating to cultural diversity, particularly in respect of its links with development and its impact on policy-making, at both national and international level; taking forward notably consideration of the advisability of an international legal instrument on cultural diversity.
2. Advancing in the definition of principles, standards and practices, on both the national and the international levels, as well as of awareness-raising modalities and patterns of cooperation, that are most conducive to the safeguarding and promotion of cultural diversity.
3. Fostering the exchange of knowledge and best practices in regard to cultural pluralism with a view to facilitating, in diversified societies, the inclusion and participation of persons and groups from varied cultural backgrounds.
4. Making further headway in understanding and clarifying the content of cultural rights as an integral part of human rights.
5. Safeguarding the linguistic heritage of humanity and giving support to expression, creation and dissemination in the greatest possible number of languages.
6. Encouraging linguistic diversity – while respecting the mother tongue – at all levels of education, wherever possible, and fostering the learning of several languages from the earliest age.
7. Promoting through education an awareness of the positive value of cultural diversity and improving to this end both curriculum design and teacher education.

8. Incorporating, where appropriate, traditional pedagogies into the education process with a view to preserving and making full use of culturally appropriate methods of communication and transmission of knowledge.

9. Encouraging “digital literacy” and ensuring greater mastery of the new information and communication technologies, which should be seen both as educational disciplines and as pedagogical tools capable of enhancing the effectiveness of educational services.

10. Promoting linguistic diversity in cyberspace and encouraging universal access through the global network to all information in the public domain.

11. Countering the digital divide, in close cooperation in relevant United Nations system organizations, by fostering access by the developing countries to the new technologies, by helping them to master information technologies and by facilitating the digital dissemination of endogenous cultural products and access by those countries to the educational, cultural and scientific digital resources available worldwide.

12. Encouraging the production, safeguarding and dissemination of diversified contents in the media and global information networks and, to that end, promoting the role of public radio and television services in the development of audiovisual productions of good quality, in particular by fostering the establishment of cooperative mechanisms to facilitate their distribution.

13. Formulating policies and strategies for the preservation and enhancement of the cultural and natural heritage, notably the oral and intangible cultural heritage, and combating illicit traffic in cultural goods and services.

14. Respecting and protecting traditional knowledge, in particular that of indigenous peoples; recognizing the contribution of traditional knowledge, particularly with regard to environmental protection and the management of natural resources, and fostering synergies between modern science and local knowledge.

15. Fostering the mobility of creators, artists, researchers, scientists and intellectuals and the development of international research programmes and partnerships, while striving to preserve and enhance the creative capacity of developing countries and countries in transition.

16. Ensuring protection of copyright and related rights in the interest of the development of contemporary creativity and fair remuneration for creative work, while at the same time upholding a public right of access to culture, in accordance with Article 27 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

17. Assisting in the emergence or consolidation of cultural industries in the developing countries and countries in transition and, to this end, cooperating in the development of the necessary infrastructures and skills, fostering the emergence of viable local markets, and facilitating access for the cultural products of those countries to the global market and international distribution networks.

18. Developing cultural policies, including operational support arrangements and/or appropriate regulatory frameworks, designed to promote the principles enshrined in this Declaration, in accordance with the international obligations incumbent upon each State.

19. Involving the various sections of civil society closely in the framing of public policies aimed at safeguarding and promoting cultural diversity.

20. Recognizing and encouraging the contribution that the private sector can make to enhancing cultural diversity and facilitating, to that end, the establishment of forums for dialogue between the public sector and the private sector.

The Member States recommend that the Director-General take the objectives set forth in this Action Plan into account in the implementation of UNESCO’s programmes and communicate it to institutions of the United Nations system and to other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned with a view to enhancing the synergy of actions in favour of cultural diversity.

The General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, meeting in Paris from the 3rd to the 21st October 2005 at its 33rd session,

Affirming that cultural diversity is a defining characteristic of humanity,

Conscious that cultural diversity forms a common heritage of humanity and should be cherished and preserved for the benefit of all,

Being aware that cultural diversity creates a rich and varied world, which increases the range of choices and nurtures human capacities and values, and therefore is a mainspring for sustainable development for communities, peoples and nations,

Recalling that cultural diversity, flourishing within a framework of democracy, tolerance, social justice and mutual respect between peoples and cultures, is indispensable for peace and security at the local, national and international levels,
Celebrating the importance of cultural diversity for the full realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms proclaimed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other universally recognized instruments,

Emphasizing the need to incorporate culture as a strategic element in national and international development policies, as well as in international development cooperation, taking into account also the United Nations Millennium Declaration (2000) with its special emphasis on poverty eradication,

Taking into account that culture takes diverse forms across time and space and that this diversity is embodied in the uniqueness and plurality of the identities and cultural expressions of the peoples and societies making up humanity,

Recognizing the importance of traditional knowledge as a source of intangible and material wealth, and in particular the knowledge systems of indigenous peoples, and its positive contribution to sustainable development, as well as the need for its adequate protection and promotion,

Recognizing the need to take measures to protect the diversity of cultural expressions, including their contents, especially in situations where cultural expressions may be threatened by the possibility of extinction or serious impairment,

Emphasizing the importance of culture for social cohesion in general, and in particular its potential for the enhancement of the status and role of women in society,

Being aware that cultural diversity is strengthened by the free flow of ideas, and that it is nurtured by constant exchanges and interaction between cultures,

Reaffirming that freedom of thought, expression and information, as well as diversity of the media, enable cultural expressions to flourish within societies,

Recognizing that the diversity of cultural expressions, including traditional cultural expressions, is an important factor that allows individuals and peoples to express and to share with others their ideas and values,

Emphasizing the vital role of cultural interaction and creativity, which nurture and renew cultural expressions and enhance the role played by those involved in the development of culture for the progress of society at large,

Recognizing the importance of intellectual property rights in sustaining those involved in cultural creativity,
Being convinced that cultural activities, goods and services have both an economic and a cultural nature, because they convey identities, values and meanings, and must therefore not be treated as solely having commercial value,

Noting that while the processes of globalization, which have been facilitated by the rapid development of information and communication technologies, afford unprecedented conditions for enhanced interaction between cultures, they also represent a challenge for cultural diversity, namely in view of risks of imbalances between rich and poor countries,

Being aware of UNESCO’s specific mandate to ensure respect for the diversity of cultures and to recommend such international agreements as may be necessary to promote the free flow of ideas by word and image,

Referring to the provisions of the international instruments adopted by UNESCO relating to cultural diversity and the exercise of cultural rights, and in particular the Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity of 2001,

STATES PARTIES

2. Documents adopted by the international organization of the francophony

2.1. Cotonou declaration (2001)

Adopted by the Third Ministerial Conference on Culture of the International Organization of La Francophonie. Cotonou (Benin), on the 15th June 2001.

1. We, the Ministers and Heads of the Delegations representing the States and governments of those countries which share the French language, believe that cultural diversity (note) constitutes one of the principal challenges of the twenty-first century. Let us remember that the recognition of cultural diversity, established in the Francophonie Charter, has been one of the fundamental guiding principles of our movement since its founding. On the occasion of the Moncton Summit (from the 3rd to the 5th September 1999), our Heads of State and Government reaffirmed that cultural goods can not, under any circumstances, be reduced to an economic value, and they affirmed the right of our Nations and governments to freely define their cultural policy and adopt the measures necessary to do so.

On the eve of the Beirut Summit, which is dedicated to intercultural dialogue, and ten years after the Lieja Conference, we reiterate our commitment to cultural diversity, as well as our desire to incorporate internal policies and instruments which guarantee its protection and promotion.

2. Composed of 55 Member States and representative governments spanning the five continents, enriched with an exceptional degree of pluralism with regard to its cultures and in possession of both national languages and a common language- French -, the Francophonie [the community of French speaking people] constitutes a laboratory for cultural diversity. The International Organization of La Francophonie, which acts as a promoter of proposals while at the same time acting as a coordination platform, strives to share its original experience and to contribute to form of international thought which is characterized by a commitment to the future of cultural diversity.

3. As defenders of an open conception of cultural diversity, we affirm our role in the promotion of a culture of peace and of the democratization of international relations. We believe that cultural diversity constitutes the only means based upon which the expression of plural identities and the creation of appropriate conditions for dialogue and the mutual enrichment of cultures and civilizations can be fostered, permitting each individual to take possession of his history, while having access to other cultures. Let us remember that cultural diversity contributes to the creation of the conditions necessary for achieving sustainable development which, according to democratic principles of justice, transparency and fairness which guarantee social cohesion and the construction of a common identity, is capable of fostering respect for differences and openness to other cultures, thus preventing the shadow of cultural insularity. We recognize the close connection which exist between cultural diversity and human dignity, and between fundamental liberties and human rights, and we emphasize that none of these can invoke cultural diversity in order to limit the scope of a right recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

4. We are convinced that controlled globalization of the economy can have a positive effect on cultural vitality and dialogue because it multiplies exchanges and contributes to the reduction of production costs. Cultural products have become an essential source of wealth creation and employment in the world. The broadening of markets poses new professional horizons for creative people. Advances in information technology offer cultures and languages, especially those which are less used, the opportunity to participate in social, cultural and economic life. We warn against the temptation to initiate a protective cultural withdrawal, which is contrary to the natural emancipating tendency of culture.

5. Let us remember, in addition, that the appearance of commercial traders who occupy a dominant position, associated with the convergence of technologies and with the general concentration of cultural industries, threatens to annul specific cultural characteristics while marginalizing independent cultural creators, producers and disseminators. Technical progress, to an ever increasing extent, poses the issue of fair remuneration to authors and creators, while differential access to materials and networks intensifies inequalities with regard to cultural expression, above all to the detriment of less advantaged populations.

6. We believe that cultural goods and services, insofar as they constitute vehicles for the transmission of a community’s cultural identity as well as elements which contribute to personal development, should receive specific treatment. In the face of the risk of increasingly homogenized forms of life and expression, as well as of conduct, the freedom of States and Governments to chart their own course constitutes the best guarantee of pluralistic cultural expression. The adoption by States and governments of cultural policies which promote cultural diversity is now, more than ever, legitimate and necessary, although it requires operational support or the creation of suitable regulatory frameworks, both for creation and production as well as for cultural diffusion.

7. Convinced of the correctness of this focus, we are committed to studying the implementation and promotion of institutional frameworks which favour cultural diversity, and more specifically:
   a) The application of suitable linguistic policies and structures which promote the harmonious development of the French language and of their associated national languages.
   b) The inclusion of the necessary promotion of cultural diversity in educational systems and programmes.
   c) The development of diversity in audiovisual communications media and in cultural offerings, the creation or reinforcement of the regulatory entities which support them, as well as, to the extent possible, the offering of access to public and private, national channels and to TV5, showcases for francophone diversity, to the greatest number of citizens possible.
   d) The implementation of support mechanisms which support the creation and the development of cultural enterprises, with particular emphasis placed on the recognition of sponsorship.
   e) The prohibition, throughout the Francophone area, of the illicit importation or exportation of cultural goods and the development of cooperation between States and governments of the International Organization of La Francophonie in this area, in addition to the study and introduction of measures and initiatives which, in accordance with international agreements, permit the recovery of cultural goods acquired in an illegal manner.
   f) Adherence to the international agreements in effect with regard to the trade in cultural goods, the protection of creative works and of their creators, the prevention of theft and illicit exportation or trafficking in cultural goods, and the adaptation of legislation to this effect.

Lastly, in the process of underscoring the importance of cultural and linguistic diversity in international organizations, we are committed to the consolidation of multilingualism in the organisms under our control. To this effect, we are committed to giving priority to the use of French, while at all times respecting the use of the official languages of States, governments and international organizations. We request that the Secretary General of the International Organization of la Francophonie perform an annual assessment with regard to the use of French in international organizations.

8. With the support of the International Organization of the Francophonie and its operators, and in collaboration with cultural protagonists from the public sphere, we have decided to implement a plan of action which favours cultural diversity in order to:
a) Support, in the national and international sphere, cultural dissemination and dialogue, fostering their practice amongst the different communities, while educating professionals.

b) Facilitate the creation and application of linguistic and cultural policies.

c) Consolidate the role of the French language and of associated national languages as creators’ vehicles of expression, along with development, education, training, information and communication in the Francophone area.

d) Improve the access of creators, artists, producers and editors of the Francophonie to international markets, as well protect their rights and facilitate exchanges between creators, students and scientists.

e) Develop cultural industries, information technologies and audiovisual communication media.

f) Introduce permanent coordination, which extends to cultural actors in civil society and to the private sector.

In addition, we reaffirm the role of cultural diversity in the promotion of peace, particularly through coordination between States and governments, as well as by means of the promotion of shared philosophy with regard to the conditions of dialogue and the mutual enrichment of cultures and civilizations.

9. With conviction, we clearly frame our focus in the context of all of the initiatives in this respect, above all at the heart of UNESCO, which performs a privileged role with regard to cultural diversity.

We are committed to the promotion of our position with regard to cultural diversity across a broad spectrum of international forums.

We believe that in the current climate, the only way to promote cultural diversity is to abstain from accepting commitments involving liberalization with regard to cultural goods and services, above all in the framework of international agreement negotiations regarding commerce, such as those held by the World Trade Organization.

We agree that the Francophonie should also support the principle of an international regulatory framework of universal character which favours the promotion of cultural diversity. This international instrument would firmly establish that it is a legitimate function of States and governments to maintain, establish and develop policies which support cultural diversity.

We promote all initiatives with regard to joint coordination and action, involving entities representing major linguistic areas, as well as States and governments convinced of the importance of this cause.

We, the Ministers and Heads of the Delegations of the States and governments of the countries which share the French language, adopt the present Declaration
We request that the Secretary General of the International Organization of la Francophonie guarantee its application.

We refer the Heads of State and Governments, in anticipation of the Ninth Beirut Summit, to the attached Plan of action project.

We understand, therefore, that linguistic diversity forms part of cultural diversity.

2.2. Beirut declaration (2002)

Adopted at the Ninth Conference of the Heads of State and Government of countries which use French as a common language. Beirut, (Lebanon) the 20\textsuperscript{th} October, 2002.

We, the Heads of State and Government of countries which use French as a common language, assembled from the 18\textsuperscript{th} to the 20\textsuperscript{th} October 2002 in Beirut, are pleased to host the Francophonie Summit in an Arab country such as Lebanon for the first time. Our presence in the Near East highlights our solidarity with Arab language and culture; this solidarity allows us to reaffirm the universal dimension of the Francophonie.

We have decided to devote this ninth Summit of the Francophonie to Cross Cultural Dialogue.

We reaffirm the primordial role of cross cultural dialogue in the promotion of peace and in the democratization of international relations. This dialogue implies respect for different identities, openness to other cultures and the search for common, shared values.

We wish to give a new impetus to the intensification of dialogue between cultures and civilizations, and to the rapprochement of different communities through mutual knowledge acquisition; thus, these objectives figure as priorities of the Francophonie in its charter.

We are determined to reinforce the role of the International Organization of La Francophonie in this respect.

We reaffirm our commitment to multilateral cooperation in the search for solutions to major international problems.

We are determined to broaden our francophone fields of coordination and cooperation in order to fight poverty and contribute to the rise of a more equitable form of globalization, which will constitute a vehicle for progress, peace, democracy and human rights, while respecting cultural and linguistic diversity, serving the interests of the most vulnerable populations and contributing to the development of all countries.
I. Intercultural dialogue, a tool for peace, democracy and human rights
We are committed to reinforcing the role of the Francophonie in its promotion of peace, democracy and human rights, and we encourage the Secretary General to proceed with his work in this field, in close collaboration with our organisms and with competent international organizations.

1. Peace
We stress our concern with regard to the continuing violence, the intensification of terrorism and the worsening of crises and conflicts in all of their forms. We are convinced that intercultural dialogue is one of the prerequisites for finding peaceful solutions and for making possible the struggle against marginalization, intolerance and extremism.

In accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, and specifically in accordance with Security Council resolution 1373, we energetically condemn any terrorist act, and we stress the need to maintain close collaboration between all of our States and governments in order to prevent and combat this scourge. We are committed, as soon as possible, to taking part in and implementing all international antiterrorists agreements; we request the signing of a general agreement with regard to terrorism. At the same time, we believe that all of the measures adopted to fight terrorism should respect the fundamental principals of the United Nations Charter, as well as international instruments with regard to human rights, humanitarian law and refugee rights.

We condemn all violations of a State’s national sovereignty and territorial integrity, the use of the territories of countries which have welcomed refugees to destabilize their countries of origin, armed aggression, occupations, the destruction, sacking and illegal exploitation of natural resources or any other form of wealth, as well as infringements of human rights. We demand that those responsible for these situations respect the United Nations Charter, and we support any initiative or legal action in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions (specifically, resolution 46/51, December 19th, 1991) and with international law, whose objective is to bring an end to these situations. We reaffirm our support of the United Nations Organization in its search for just and peaceful solutions to these problematic situations.

We reiterate our international commitments with respect to providing protection and assistance to civilian populations, particularly to women and children in situations of armed conflict.

We encourage the International Organization of the Francophonie to become more involved in the preparation and monitoring of major international conferences dealing with peace, democracy and human rights which take place under the auspices of the United Nations.
We reaffirm our full solidarity with Lebanon and its people in their efforts to overcome political, economic and social challenges.

With regard to the situation in the Near East, we demand the immediate renewal of the peace process in accordance with the principals agreed upon at the Madrid conference and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions, in particular United Nations Security Council resolutions 242 and 338.

To this effect, we support the Arab peace initiative adopted unanimously during the Beirut Arab Summit, which was held on March 27th and 28th, 2002. We believe that all of its components taken together, particularly those with regard to territorial exchanges in exchange for peace as well as those related to Palestinian refugees, comprise the best framework for finding a just, lasting and comprehensive solution to the region’s problems.

We defend the primacy of international law and the critical role of the United Nations; we appeal to a sense of collective responsibility in the resolution of the Iraqi crisis, and we urge Iraq to fully comply with all of its obligations.

We are pleased to be able to point out that on September 16th, 2002, Iraq officially accepted the unconditional renewal of United Nations inspections.

We condemn the attempted coup d’etat and the questioning of the constitutional order on the Ivory Coast.

We call on the entire political class and on the people of the Ivory Coast to show moderation, to avoid resorting to violence and to respect life and property.

We support the efforts made, particularly by the ECOWAS, to promote dialogue, the only path to lasting reconciliation.

We encourage the Secretary General of the Francophonie to continue to promote the mediation attempts which have been initiated.

On July 9th, 2002, we were pleased to received news regarding the founding of the African Union in Durban (South Africa), which confirms the desire on the part of African Heads of State and Government to reinforce cooperation and solidarity between African States.

With regard to this, we indicate our satisfaction with the African Union’s adoption of the New Partnership for Africa’s Development (NOPADA/NEPAD) as well as the adoption of the G8 decision, at the Kananaskis meeting in June of 2002, to complement this initiative with a Plan of action for Africa.

We urge the Secretary General to ensure that the International Organization of the Francophonie gives its support to this African initiative destined, principally, to promote peace, security, democracy and respect for human rights.

We believe that African countries play a crucial role in mediation and arbitration processes, whose aim is to defuse latent tension and control crises in Africa. In this sense, we support mechanisms of a continental and regional nature whose aim is to prevent, regulate and manage endemic conflicts, both within African States and on their borders.
We support all of the efforts undertaken to halt networks which engage in illegal trafficking and uncontrolled trade in arms. We strenuously condemn the enlistment and recruitment of child soldiers, which particularly affects the African continent, and we reaffirm our intention to efficiently apply the international instruments which protect the rights of children.

We reiterate our support for the measures intended to consolidate peace in societies which are recovering from armed conflict, above all with respect to the recovery and destruction of weapons, as well as with respect to the reinsertion of demobilized soldiers, particularly adolescents, into a tolerant society which respects democratic values.

2. Democracy
We declare that Francophony, democracy and development are three indissoluble elements. We are convinced that democracy requires that all levels of society engage in dialogue. To this effect, we are determined to implement the Bamako Declaration (note) with regard to the evaluation of democratic practice, rights and liberties in the Francophone area, which constitutes a step forward in the history of our Organization. This democratic commitment should principally involve the adoption of francophone cooperative actions which find their inspiration in the positive practices and experiences of the States and governments which make up the francophony. To this effect, we present the Programme of Action which accompanies the present Declaration.

Likewise, we reaffirm our condemnation of all forms of genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity, which constitute massive violations of human rights, as well as of coup d’ états and grave infringements of the constitutional order, since the above violate democratic principles.

Conscious of how important it for women to participate fully and fairly in political, economic, social and cultural life, we adhere to the Luxembourg Declaration on the topic of “Women, power and development.”

3. Human rights
We stress the universal and indissoluble nature of civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, including the right to develop, and we are determined to guarantee the full enjoyment of these rights to all citizens.

To this effect, we request of the Secretary General that he proceed, in collaboration with competent international organizations, with his efforts to ratify the principal international and regional instruments which guarantee these rights, as well as requesting that Member-states efficiently implement them.

We are committed, at all levels of society, to combating the impunity of those who infringe human rights, reinforcing the capacity of competent judicial and administrative institutions. We declare our satisfaction with the entrance into effect on the 1st July 2002, of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which shall contribute to ending the practice of impunity and shall permit us to bring perpetrators of acts of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes to trial. To this effect, we invite the States which have still not done so to ratify the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court or to join the Statute as soon as possible.

We believe that, out of respect for the United Nations Charter and the principals of international law, recognition of cultural diversity can justify the adoption, by States and governments, of measures which protect persons belonging to specific minority groups.

We encourage the founding of new associations, based on private and public initiative, with the mobilization of all actors who work for the recognition and protection of and respect for human rights.

II. The francophony, a forum for intercultural dialogue

1. Culture
We confirm our support for an open conception of cultural diversity, reiterated in the Moncton Summit and established in the Cotonou Declaration. We underscore our commitment to the richness of the plural cultural identity which makes up the francophone area, as well as our commitment to its preservation.

We believe that the recognition of cultural diversity and uniqueness, provided that the values, norms and principles established in the United Nations Charter and the International Human Rights Charter are respected, creates conditions favourable for intercultural dialogue.

We stress the importance of economic factors associated with culture and cultural industries, a sector which generates economic growth and employment. We intend to foster its development and to provide agents participating in the sector with a dynamic framework.

2. Linguistic policy
Let us remember that the French language we share constitutes the founding bond of our community, and we reaffirm our intention to join forces to promote multilingualism and to guarantee the status, dissemination and the promotion of French as a great language of communication on an international scale.

In addition to highlighting the importance of linguistic diversity in international organizations as well as in the remaining organizations under our control, we reaffirm our commitment to prioritizing the use of French, while at all times respecting the official languages of the States and governments of international organizations. To this effect, we request that the Secretary General act resolutely in this sense, and we strive, with this purpose in mind, to reinforce our bonds with other competent, international organizations, particularly with those which represent major linguistic areas.

Therefore, in keeping with the Cotonou Declaration, we renew our commitment to the support and development of policies which support plurilingualism in order to promote knowledge of and adherence to both the French language and to associated national languages throughout the heart of the Francophone world.

3. Cultural policy

We confirm our desire to prevent cultural goods and services from becoming mere commodities. We reaffirm the right of our States and governments to freely define both their cultural policy, as well as the instruments necessary to promote this policy. We are determined to advocate these position at diverse international forums.

We are pleased by the adoption of the UNESCO Declaration with regard to cultural diversity. We support the principle which encompasses the creation of a universal regulatory framework, and, as a consequence of this, we have decided to actively contribute to the adoption by UNESCO of an international agreement on cultural diversity, by means of which the right of States and governments to maintain, establish and develop policies which support culture and cultural diversity is established. Its objective should be to define an applicable right with regard to cultural diversity. Likewise, this agreement should promote openness to other cultures and their expressions.

We entrust the Secretary General of the International Organization of la Francophonie, within the framework of the Permanent Council, with the creation of a work group responsible for contributing to international debate, above all in UNESCO and in organisms such as the International Network on Cultural Policy (INCP), with the objective of establishing an international agreement with regard to cultural diversity.

We believe, that under current conditions, the preservation of cultural diversity involves abstaining from any commitment to liberalize cultural goods and services with the WTO, in order to avoid compromising the efficiency of instruments intended to promote and support cultural diversity.

We are determined to implement all the measures needed to prevent a relatively greater use of information and communication technologies from creating new inequalities, from transferring power to more innovative economies and from increasing the differences between our own societies. We are therefore committed to supporting the development of these information technologies in order to reduce existing inequality in the francophone area. We actively participate in the World Summit on the Information Society which will be held in Geneva (2003) and subsequently in Tunis (2005). For this reason, we have decided to organize a ministerial conference of the Francophonie on information and communication technologies over the course of the present two year period.

We are determined to continue with the implementation and reinforcement, at the heart of our States and governments, of institutional frameworks, regulatory organs and policies oriented towards the development of audiovisual communication media, the dissemination of information, access to international markets for cultural actors and the protection of their rights.

We undertake to support the widest possible access to Francophone multilateral television and to develop its role as a worldwide showcase of cultural diversity.

III. A francophonie characterized by a greater commitment to solidarity, which promotes lasting economic and social development
The challenges posed by globalization and its control places us in a situation of shared responsibility. Intercultural dialogue, which promotes a mutually enriching exchange of knowledge and experiences, helps us respond to current challenges and create conditions for continued development.

Poverty, illiteracy, pandemics, particularly AIDS, a lack of safety and organized crime, as well as ecological disruptions are the plagues which prevent the most vulnerable countries and communities from participating in development. We are committed to combating these scourges by reinforcing cooperation in our community and strengthening our bonds with other competent, multilateral authorities.

Convinced as we are that education and training are central pillars of sustainable development, we reaffirm the priority given to their promotion and support.

Together with the entire international community, we have committed ourselves to Education For All (EFA) objectives, defined during the World Education Forum in Dakar, in 2001, oriented towards enabling all children, especially girls, to access basic education and towards the implementation of free, high quality, compulsory primary education, which promotes their social and professional integration.

We are determined to consolidate the role of the Francophonie in these realms, and we are committed, in synergy with our development partners, to the promotion of policies which stress universal education, based on the values of fairness, solidarity and tolerance.

We reaffirm the role of the public authorities in the creation and supervision of educational and training policies.

To this effect, we request that the Conference of Education Ministers, within the most opportune time periods, carry out the indispensable reform which will enable it to assume its statutory duties in order to promote the francophone perspective in international organisms which participate in the monitoring of the Dakar Forum, and to create the conditions which will enable our educational systems to access international financing and contribute to the orientation of programmes created by the International Governmental Agency of the Francophonie in the area of education.

We hope that an increase in solidarity with the most vulnerable populations as well as with poor countries will lead to progress. We are pleased with regard to the important role played by women and young people in development, and on the day after the extraordinary session focusing on children of the United Nations General Assembly, we affirm the need for the adoption of a common policy, characterized by solidarity, for the protection of children's rights.

We are determined to actively contribute to the implementation of the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NOPADA/NEPAD) and, to this effect, we request that the Secretary General ensure the attainment of a real synergy between this process, whose objective is the economic and social development of Africa, the G8 Plan of Action and the actions of the International Organization of la Francophonie, participating above all in the creation of regional and sub regional strategies on the continent.

We encourage the international community, particularly financial institutions and the private sector, to contribute to the implementation of this new process.

We are pleased with the progress demonstrated by Southeast Asian and Pacific rim countries, members of the Francophonie, with regard to economic and social development. We reaffirm that their adherence to francophone values contributes to the reinforcement of the Francophonie and helps to endow it with a universal dimension. In this regard, we express our solidarity and our support for the reinforcement of the cooperation programmes undertaken in these regions of the world.

We are pleased with the process initiated as a result of the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which continued at the Monterey Conference, with regard to development financing, and at the Johannesburg Summit with regard to sustainable development. We are also pleased with the new cycle of multilateral, commercial negotiations at Doha. We will maintain our efforts to combat poverty, and we will focus our solidarity, to begin with, on the least developed countries (LDC) and, subsequently, on small island States, the objective being their entrance into the worldwide exchange of goods and services.

Our intention is that the Tenth Conference of the Heads of State and government of French speaking countries constitute a decisive phase in the implementation of the Johannesburg Plan of Action.

By means of the promotion of a coordination agreement initiated in the Ministerial Conference at Monaco, we will defend these positions before international organisms, particularly before those of an economic nature. We will facilitate the efficient participation of each of the States and member-governments in the work of these organizations.

In order to construct a Francophonie characterized by greater solidarity and initiative, we invite traders to support actions whose objective is the reinforcement of North-South and South-South economic cooperation at the service of sustainable development in the francophone area.

We are pleased with the appointment of Mr. Abdou Diouf to the post of Secretary General of the International Organization of the Francophonie, and we will fully support him in the performance of his important duties.

In order to reach the objectives defined in the present Declaration, we adopt the attached Plan of Action, and we will provide the Francophonie with the resources necessary to attain these objectives.

Vietnam and Laos remind us of their reservations with regard to section 5 of article 2 and section 3 of article 5 of the Bamako Declaration.
3. African reference documents concerning culture and its role in development

(Adopted in the framework of the First All African Cultural Festival organized under the aegis of the Organization of African Unity, Algiers, July/August 1969)

Taking as basis for study, reflection and discussion, the inaugural address by His Excellency, Houari Bournedienne, President of the Revolutionary Council, President of the Council of Ministers of the Algerian People’s Democratic Republic, and current Chairman of the Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, the Symposium of the First Pan-African Cultural Festival held in Algiers from the 21st July to the 1st August 1969 fully discussed the theme of the Symposium i.e.

- The realities of African culture
- The role of African culture in national liberation struggle and in the consolidation of African Unity
- The role of African culture in the economic and social development of Africa.

Realities of african culture

Culture starts with the people as creators of themselves and transformers of their environment. Culture, in its widest and most complete sense, enables men to give shape to their lives.

It is not freely received but is built up by the people. It is the vision of man and of the world and is thus systems of thought, philosophies, sciences, beliefs, arts and languages.

It is likewise the action of man on himself and on the world to transform it, and thus covers the social, political, economic and technical fields.

Culture is essentially dynamic: in other words it is both rooted in the people and orientated towards the future.

We must go back to the sources of our values, not to confine ourselves to them, but rather to draw up a critical inventory in order to get rid of archaic and stultifying elements, the fallacious and alienating foreign elements brought in by colonialism, and to retain only those elements, which are still valid, bringing them up to date and enriching them with the benefits of the scientific, technical and social revolutions so as to bring them into line with what is modern and universal.

Colonialism is an evil that has been experienced and endured by all our people, first in its most distinctive form, the slave trade, which devastated almost all the African continent, and in its most tangible and insolent form, political domination, over which we must strive to triumph.

But its machinery is complex and cannot be simplified into a single operation. It is a well-known economic, social and political fact that colonialism is a total action, both in its essence and its spirit.

In order to survive it has to justify itself morally and intellectually by force and coercion to extend its hold over all fields of human activity.

In order to exist as such, it must exercise in addition to its concrete and material hegemony, a social and intellectual hold-particularly over the ruling classes on which it relies.

It consequently thinks that it can challenge men with impunity and deny their very essence.

The peoples of Africa believed and spontaneously felt that liberty is one and the same as nationhood, and that the welfare and progress of our people have to be achieved around our specific personality. They naturally accepted that liberty, nation and personality are essentially the origin and product of culture.

Culture is the essential cement of every social group, its primary means of intercommunication and of coming to grips with the outside world: it is its soul, its materialisation and its capacity for change.

Thus culture is the totality of tangible and intangible tools, works of art and science, knowledge and know-how, languages, modes of thought, patterns of behaviour and experience acquired by the people in its liberating effort to dominate nature and to build up an ever improving society.

An imposed culture generally bred a type of African intellectual not at home in his national realities because of his depersonalisation and alienation.

The African man of culture, the artist, the intellectual in general must integrate himself into his people and shoulder the particularly decisive responsibilities incumbent upon him. His action must inspire that radical transformation of the mind without which it is impossible for a people to overcome its economic and social underdevelopment. The people must be the first to benefit from their economic and cultural riches.

But culture is the sum total of experiences and concrete expressions, linked to the history of peoples. Thus culture, from our point of view, must embrace the particular expressions that characterise each major civilization. But our Africanity is determined by profound similarities and common aspirations.
Africanity obeys the law of a dialectic of the particular and the general of specificity and universality, in other words of variety at the origin and unity at the destination.

African culture, art and science, whatever the diversity of their expression, are in no way essentially different from each other. They are but the specific expression of a single universality.

Beyond similarities and convergent forms of thought, beyond the common heritage, Africanity is also a shared destiny, the fraternity of the liberating struggle and a common future, which should be assumed by all in order to master it. Africanity springs from the double source of our common heritage and our common destiny and that is why it is worthwhile, at the present stage of our historical development, to examine a number of problems linked with the origin, the existence and the development of our culture.

Culture is a dynamic means of edifying the nation over and above tribal or ethnic divisions and African Unity above all forms of chauvinism. Culture, which is created by the people, may be confiscated by a dominating class. Now culture should be a constant search for the people’s creative consciousness. Any African cultural policy should therefore be based on the necessity of enabling the people to become informed, educated, mobilized and organized so as to make them responsible for their cultural heritage and its development. The preservation of culture has saved Africans from the attempts made to turn them into peoples with no soul nor history. Culture protected them. It is quite obvious that they would henceforth wish to use it to forward their progress and development, for if culture—a permanent and continuous creation—is a definition of personalities and a link between men, it also gives an impetus to progress. This is the reason why Africa devotes such care and accords such value to the recovery of its cultural heritage, to the defence of its personality and the creation of new branches of its culture.

It would have been easy for certain people and convenient for others if we had not set out conditions for our political independence—we could have been satisfied with merely that and have borrowed thought, language and art from those who had the good fortune to enjoy a harmonious internal development. We might have also been satisfied with a folkloric cultural past, a poor man’s culture, and have given up all thought of true freedom and real independence. But the colonized peoples have never given up their inner identity.

In this, the national language plays an irreplaceable role, it is the mainstay and the medium of culture, the guarantee of popular support both in its creation, and its consumption.

Once we had recovered our sovereignty, it was a first essential duty for us to revive the national languages inherited from our forefathers, without in any way calling to question the profound unity of our nations.

Language is one of these features in the life of peoples, which embody their genius.
It develops with them, and they cannot be deprived of it without being out of it, wounded and handicapped.

Nevertheless, and in order to survive and fight, a part of our peoples had to learn the language of our colonizers.

There is no one language, which is basically more suited than another to be a mainstay of science and knowledge. A language translates and expresses the lives and thoughts of men. From the time when our development was suspended, our cultures trampled underfoot and the teaching of our languages often forbidden, it has been obvious that we must double our efforts to make African languages efficient instruments for our development.

The analysis of our cultural realities reveals to us the dynamic elements in the life of peoples, in both their spiritual and material aspects.

Among these elements, which made up our indomitable African personality, we should emphasize these values, which have come down to us in spite of the vagaries of our history and the colonialist attempts at depersonalization. From them can be abstracted a sense of ethics revealing a profound inborn sense of solidarity, hospitality, mutual aid, brotherhood and the feeling of belonging to the same humanity.

These values and this sense of ethics are to be found expressed in our African languages, in our oral and written literatures, in our tales, legends, sayings and proverbs, transmitting the wisdom and experiences evolved by our peoples.

The knowledge of our history will scientifically lay the foundations of our personality and thus constitute a factor of progress, enabling us to show our capabilities and examine our possibilities.

The methods of organizing African society are lessons for us and will enable us to be ourselves while acceding to the modern world.

The ingenuity of our techniques, if there is need to mention it, shows our creative capacity.

Our arts, paintings, sculptures, architecture, music, songs, dances and our plays are a testimony to our existence and that of our culture.

This culture, which has for long been considered by colonialism to be outlandish and only relegated to museums, is today a living expression in the world. This world in which we want to take our place and the future, which we have a mission to build, are dominated by problems of development and progress.

We reaffirm that our culture would be lifeless if it ignored modern science and technology. It requires therefore a personal original contribution to the one and the same heritage, the same dynamic progress and social resolution.
Role of African culture in the liberation struggle and African Unity

It is the duty of African States to answer total colonization with a total liberation struggle.

Unity of Africa is rooted first and foremost in History. Under the colonial domination, African countries found themselves in the same political, economic, social and cultural situation. Cultural domination entailed the distortion of the personality of a part of the African peoples, their history, systematically disparaged and suppressed, their religious and moral values, attempted to replace progressively and officially their language with that of the colonizer, thus rendering them powerless and stripping them of their raison d’être.

Consequently, African culture, though checked in its development at the level of the masses, was enshrined by its language, manners, songs, dances, beliefs, etc. But despite the underestimation it suffered, African culture has revealed itself to be a vital rampart for resisting colonial intrusion and has in this way stood the test of time alongside the African spirit.

Colonization favoured the formation of a cultural elite for assimilating and imbibing colonial culture, even sustaining it and often serving as guarantee. Thus, there was a serious and profound rift between the African elite and the African popular masses.

Only the adherence to the concepts of freedom, independence and nationhood enabled the conflict to be placed in its real context. The dual culture lapsed with the advent of liberation movements, wars of independence and firm and unshakeable opposition to colonial servitude. Africa’s struggle has provided both material and spiritual structures within which African culture can develop and thus prove the natural dialectical correlation between national liberation and culture.

For the African countries, which won their freedom, and for those that are in armed conflict with the colonial powers culture had been and will remain a weapon. In all cases, armed struggle for liberation was and is a pre-eminently cultural act.

The experience of liberation movements shows that the integration of the intellectuals into the masses gives a great authenticity to their work and vitalises African culture.

Both the winning of true independence and the armed struggles still in progress have permitted a cultural renaissance. The fight for freedom, in all its forms, has logically become the constant factor of cultural Africanity. Thus Africanity is a reality essentially deriving from men born of the same land and living in the same continent, bound to share the same destiny by the inevitable process of decolonization at all levels and complete liberation, notwithstanding regional or national specificities.

Because it is involved in the same struggle, because it is a prerequisite of national and continental liberation, in a word, because it is primary and final motive of man and because it alone is likely to constitute the first basis of resistance to threats hanging over Africa, Africanity goes beyond national and regional concerns.

Africa’s present necessities require from artists and intellectuals a firm commitment to Africa’s basic principles and its desire for freedom. Today’s cultural act should be at the centre of today’s striving for authenticity and for the development of African values.

The cultural policy of neo-colonialism calls for an objective and concrete critical analysis of our present cultural situation. Neo-colonialism, aware of the still negative aspects to this situation, has conceived a new well-concerted form of action, which, although no longer violent, is no less ominous and dangerous, subtle and insidious as it is for the development and future culture of Africa.

Real dangers are menacing our culture as regards both the perpetration of alien norms, and that of mental prototypes of institutions and political life.

A cultural front should therefore take the place of the front of resistance, for culture remains the vital and essential force of the nation, the safeguard of our existence and the ultimate resource of our combat.

Therefore only Africanity can bring about a resurrection and rebirth of an avant-garde African humanism, confronted by other cultures; it will take its place as part of universal humanism and continue from there. Our artists, authors and intellectuals must, if they are to be of service to Africa, find their inspiration in Africa.

Complete independence is thus the basic condition for the development of culture in the service of masses.

The role of culture in the economic and social development of Africa

Heirs to a civilization that is thousands of years old and rich in untold economic possibilities, we stand ready today to continue in the total recovery of our personalities, the struggle that won us our independence.

The assertion of our profound identity and the utilization of our material riches for the good of the people will enable us to participate actively in the building of a universal civilization as freed and free partners.

Culture, simultaneously representing a style of life, an economic and social relationship determined at a particular moment in human evolution, forms a totality with political life. As a permanent and continuous creation and the expression of the perenniality of a people, African culture definitely intends to put itself to the service of the liberation of Africa from Colonialism in all its forms and from all forms of alienation, and to serve the economic and social betterment of the people. Safeguarded and experienced by the people, it becomes a motivating element in social and economic development and a factor in the transformation of the environment.
A society or a culture can stay itself while undergoing economic development, providing it takes the necessary steps.

A place must necessarily be made for science and technology as for economic rationality, the need to look ahead and other prerequisites of our age. This is because no culture is passively operative. In order to place its resources to the aid of development, it must be revived and brought up to date by contact with technology, which tends to create a universal civilization. A society should both return to its essential being or else crumble away, and to its usefulness, or lose its existence and autonomy. It perseveres and adapts itself by a continuous dialectic effort of giving and contributing between national culture and universal values.

Moreover, it is absolutely necessary to watch over the defence and preservation of African dignity and personality. But this looking back or constant reference to the living sources of Africanity must avoid a complacent and unfruitful evocation of the past, and must, on the contrary, imply an innovating effort and an adaptation of African culture to be modern requirements of well-balanced social and economic development.

The following objectives were adopted—to free African society from the socio-cultural conditions hindering its development and to rid African culture of alienating factors by integrating it, in particular with popular action.

African culture, faithful to its origins, must be revived and brought into the modern world by contact with science and technology in order to develop its operative capacities for, while technology progresses by accumulation, culture progresses by creation and fidelity. All means of doing this should be set in motion.

Africa must recover from a retardation, which is primarily cultural. This entails:

(a) A change in attitude towards the material world, towards quantification and scientific rationalism. The role of education may have a determinant, beneficial or baneful influence according to the importance one attaches to technical instruction.
(b) The movement of political power towards a genuine revolution in the climate of opinion.
(c) The combined effort of members of the community, which will only be possible if the citizens really take their future in their own, hands in an atmosphere of freedom and happiness.

In addition to Arabic, which has been for some years an official language of the OAU, it is recommended that studies be undertaken to promote the use of other widely spoken languages.

The immediate tasks impinging upon all of us are to make African languages into written languages and the medium of scientific thought, to ensure that education, adult literacy and the emancipation of women are open to all Africans.
Any delay in the reorganization of the present educational system will result in a delay in the training of responsible public servants and this justifies the continuation of foreign technical and cultural aid. We must get out of this vicious circle as quickly as possible as this aid, if prolonged, could turn into a scarcely disguised form of domination.

The principal aim of higher education is to form the trained personnel needed for both economic and cultural production, and these people need to make themselves understood by both the workers and the masses. This higher education should then, wherever possible, be given in the national language. These tasks will be all the better carried out for being supported by mass information media belonging to Africa (Radio stations, TV, cinemas, Theatres and cultural centres in factories, offices, etc.) and by an increase in the number of cultural events and exchanges.

These values will enable us to face, without frustration or alienation, the inevitable social transformation entailed by the process of development. We must use those that can contribute to economic progress and the mobilization of the masses, so as to arouse the enthusiasm needed for major collective effort.

In this gigantic effort to recover Africa’s cultural heritage and adapt it to the needs of technological civilization, the artist, the thinker, the scientist and the intellectual have all their part to play, i.e. to contribute, within the framework of popular action to revealing and making known the common inspiration and common heritage, which go to make up Africanity. Generally speaking, Africa must return to its original modes of perception, its techniques, its media of communication and bring them up to date so as to turn them into powerful means of dominating Nature and of harmonizing the development of African society.

Likewise, it rests with us to avoid the obstacle of the academic and futile search for a dilettante culture leading to unproductive and decadent aestheticism.

We should therefore take systematic and appropriate measures to imbue our youth with African culture, so that the young people of our continent may understand its profound values and may be better armed to resist certain demoralizing cultural manifestations, and better prepared to become integrated into the masses.

In this way, African culture, true to itself and drawing strength from the deep sources of its wealth and of its creative genius, not only intends to defend its personality and its authenticity but also to become an instrument in the service of the people in the liberation of Africa from all forms of alienation, an instrument of a synchronized economic and social development. It will thus bring about the technico-industrial promotion of Africa, and also a living and fraternal humanism far removed from racialism and exploitation.

Culture, as a decisive force in economic and social development, constitutes the surest means for our peoples to overcome their technological, i.e. economic, handicap and the most effective force in our victorious resistance against imperialist blackmail.

It has become now both urgent and necessary to free Africa from illiteracy, to promote the permanent education of the masses in every field, to develop in them a scientific, technological and critical spirit and attitude and to render popular culture fully effective.

All our efforts should be towards a true revolution in Africa’s cultural activity.

The popular character of our culture should promote a specific conception of scientific organization and the rationalisation of our productive activities, as well as the methods of appropriating the means of production (land, natural resources, industry, etc.) and the distribution of the goods produced.

Africanity should be apparent in a concrete and tangible manner in the joint use of our national forces and natural resources to promote a harmonious and accelerated economic, social and cultural development throughout the continent.

Recommendations
The symposium made the following suggestions for the dynamic utilisation of the elements of African culture:

1. To reinforce and intensify Africa’s cultural activities by giving the OAU Committees for Education, Culture, Science and Health a more active and continuous role. 2. To create cultural magazines edited in the working languages of the OAU and if possible in other African languages.

3. To assemble a corpus of the arts and an encyclopaedia of the African continent and support fine arts organizations in the member countries of the OAU and the publication of an encyclopaedia of literature and the arts; to establish courses in the universities to teach the values and the realities of African culture.

4. To promote and co-ordinate research in all spheres of traditional medicine and African pharmacopoeia in order to modernize them by giving them a scientific foundation and by ridding them of their esoteric and empirical character so that they may become a source of enrichment for modern medicine; to promote, encourage and co-ordinate scientific research in Africa.

5. To set up a Pan-African Institute for the film industry. In this field, Africa should produce its own mode of expression and choose suitable means to make its expression available to the people. The African States should, therefore, organize themselves to produce, release and market their own films and to fight against the limits, which are holding up the development of a truly African cinema.

6. To establish organizations for the publication and sale in Africa of books, school handbooks, records and newspapers so as to fight speculation and make them instruments for mass education. The symposium supports the OAU’s decision to set up a Pan-African News Agency; so as to intensify the exchange of news between African countries.

7. To establish suitable organizations to integrate African arts into industry and business.

8. To protect the intellectual property of Africans by appropriate legislation.

9. To take all necessary steps, including that of calling upon international institutions, so as to recuperate the works of art and archives seized by the colonial powers; to take necessary steps to stop the drain of cultural assets leaving the African continent.

10. To increase cultural exchanges through such means as exhibitions, conferences, seminars and meetings of young people, women and workers, intellectuals, militants and officials for a greater mutual understanding.

11. To organize inter-African economic and technical aid.

12. To promote the use and the teaching of national languages necessary for the authentic expression of African culture as a popular tool for the spreading of science and technology; to give competitive prizes for practical techniques invented by Africans, so as to stimulate creativity in the technological field.

13. To reform and develop education at all levels so as to give it the efficient means for the fulfilment of its mission to promote and develop the African peoples. The contents of this teaching, the methods, and the school books must take into account our national realities, and the necessity of reinforcing our unity and solidarity by a greater degree of mutual understanding.

14. To translate into our languages the scientific, philosophical, historical and literary works, which constitute the common heritage of mankind; to encourage the translation of African literary works into foreign languages.

15. To encourage and develop in the African continent handicrafts free from commercial speculation.

16. To associate the women and youth of African more actively and massively in the transmission and the full flowering of our cultural heritage.

17. To establish prizes to recompense the more genuine and useful works of the African artists and writers.

18. To give firmer support to the African national liberation movements to promote an artistic, political and ideological renewal;

19. To arrive at a full understanding, and to make the masses and international opinion aware of the value and the impact of the struggle for national liberation.

20. To expose the real facts of the liberation struggles and publicize them widely by every means of communication available to the African States.

21. To enable the African liberation movements to participate actively in unified cultural action, within the framework of African cultural institutions.
22. To enable African experiences in cultural decolonization in every field—history, language, education, etc.—to be studied and made known in the different African countries.
23. To give Africa and her history pride of place in research, in meetings of experts and African men of science, and in school and university programs.
24. To judge African arts according to the standards of the African continent and in accordance with the requirements of unity and the liberation struggle; to create appropriate cultural institutions in Africa for this purpose.
25. To encourage African artists in their mission of reflecting the concerns of the people so as to bridge the gap created and maintained by colonial alienation between the intellectual elite and the masses.
26. To enable African artists and intellectuals to re-establish the historical truth, while participating in the combat of our people and also to help the liberation struggles by making people aware of them, both inside and outside Africa.
27. To bring about participation of the people in the decisions, the organization and management of economic, social and cultural matters.
28. To define the methods by which the people can recover all natural resources and essential means of production.
29. To transpose Africanity into:
   (a) a unified African Trade Union movement
   (b) the development of mass organizations (youth organizations, women’s organizations, etc.)
30. To promote a programme of a technical cooperation between the African countries, especially to offset the ravages due to the ‘brain drain’.
31. To provide primary education to all children regardless of sex, race or religion.
32. To mount a massive campaign for functional adult literacy.
33. To develop those cultural media, which are the most directly accessible to the people (cinemas, theatres, radio and television).
34. To establish cultural units in the countryside and in business organizations, capable of:
   (a) spreading elementary scientific knowledge
   (b) spreading a knowledge of works of art in both African and other traditions
   (c) stimulating cultural activities in the rural areas through the use of mass media; and building museums to enrich the mind of peoples living in the less developed areas.
35. To make a survey of African folklore and popularising it among the masses.
36. To promote the Panafricanisation and regionalization of the universities and the technical institutes, which are the meeting point of youth; these cultural centres must give the opportunity to all African students to pursue their studies in the best conditions.

37. To set up a system of exchange of documents and experience in mass education between the member countries of the OAU.

38. To exchange programmes of economic, social and cultural nature between the African radio, TV stations and film libraries, particularly through the medium of the URTNA.

39. To hold inter-regional cultural seminars and of painting and handicraft exhibitions with a view to fostering the economic and social development of the continent.

40. Contribution to UNESCO project on African History.

3.2. The Accra Declaration of the Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa (1975)

We, representing the Governments of the African Member States of unesco, meeting at Accra from the 27th October to the 6th November 1975 on the occasion of the Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa, organized by unesco with the cooperation of the Organization of African Unity,

Recalling that under colonial domination, African countries found themselves in identical political, economic, social and cultural positions;
• that on the cultural level, domination led to the depersonalization of some of the peoples of Africa, falsified their history, systemically denigrated and opposed African values and attempted to replace African languages progressively and officially by those of the colonial powers;
• that colonialisation encouraged the formation of an élite, too frequently absorbed and assimilated into the foreign culture, and that a deep division appeared between this élite and the African people at large,

Convinced
• that African unity is grounded, first and foremost, in history;
• that complete independence is the prime condition for the flourishing of culture in the service of the people,

Declare
• that the assertion of cultural identity expresses a reality common to all the peoples of Africa;
• that cultural identity serves as a foundation for the independence and the construction of modern African nations;
• that African culture remains a decisive weapon in struggles for liberation and in the continuing fight against colonialism, racism and apartheid;
• that it is a basic manifestation of the feeling of unity and solidarity inspiring contemporary Africa;
• that it represents a guarantee in international relationships and the prerequisite for the establishment of a new, more equitable and more humane world order, based on the right to national self-determination and unconditional recognition of the equality and dignity of all cultures;
• that the full enjoyment and promotion of human rights can be ensured only in the framework of genuine political, economic and cultural independence;
• that development must aim primarily at enriching human life by providing a harmonious balance of values;

Affirm the will of the African States:
• to embark resolutely on the search for patterns of development, which confirm to their particular genius, so as to meet the needs and legitimate aspirations of their peoples and safeguard the authenticity of their values;
• in so doing, to enable the African men, women and young people of our time to develop harmoniously and play an active part in the life of the nation and help them join in the main stream of world affairs;
• hence to give to culture the decisive position, which it should rightfully occupy in the process of global development, of which man is both the agent and the end;

Declare
• that cultural authenticity and technical progress, in the reciprocity and complementarity of their effects, are the surest guarantee of cultural development and of the advent of new societies linking up with the lofty tradition of African humanism;
• that it is therefore necessary in this connexion to bring about a change in attitudes and the rejection of cultural patterns, which are ill-fitted to express the cultural reality of present-day Africa;
• that it is also necessary to make effective use of scientific and technological advances and the mass media so as to strengthen cultural identity and the safeguarding of authenticity, and so as to foster a harmonious relationship between man, his environment and his society;
• that it is urgent to define educational systems, which incorporate African values of civilization, ensure that young people will be rooted in African culture and enlist the active participation of all social forces, in a context of lifelong education;
• that it is no less urgent to take resolute steps for promotion of the African languages -, which are irreplaceable tools of social communication, auxiliaries and vehicles of cultural heritages in their most authentic form and sure guarantees for their essentially popular nature - and to draw up a systematic inventory of cultural heritages, especially in the historical, linguistic and artistic spheres;

Affirm
• that African cultural diversity, the expression of a self-same universality, is a factor of equilibrium and creative fertility, serving the cause of social mobilization and national integration;
• that the wealth of the cultural heritage shared by all the peoples of Africa, which is the historical basis of African personality, is the surest guarantee of African unity;
• that African cultural creativity has never ceased to enrich the cultural heritage of mankind and to enhance Africa’s presence in the world;
• that African cultures, in their turn, remain receptive to outside contributions and are alert to the major trends at work in the modern world;
• that cultural cooperation among free and equal partners fosters mutual enrichment of cultures in a spirit of respect for each, and can be a determining factor in the promotion of international understanding and world peace;

Recognize accordingly the responsibilities incumbent on African States with regard to the definition of national cultural policies, which must be geared to the policies decided on in the political, economic and social fields;

Affirm our determination to implement or intensify our cultural policies for this purpose, bearing in mind the interaction that takes place between them and the policies followed in regard to, inter alia, education, science and technology, communication and the environment;

Undertake
• to be guided accordingly in considering the recommendations made by this Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa, which represents a milestone in the history of African culture;
• Pay tribute to UNESCO’s activities to further the cultural development of Africa; and
• Welcome the draft Cultural Charter that the Organization of African Unity is proposing to draw up.
3.3. The Language Plan of Action for Africa (1986)

PREAMBLE
We, Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, meeting in our 22nd Ordinary Session, in Addis Ababa, from the 28th to the 30th July 1986.

GUIDED
• By the Organization of African Unity Charter,
• By the Pan-African Cultural Manifesto of Algiers (1969),
• By the Inter-Governmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa, organised by UNESCO in Accra (1975), in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity,
• By the Cultural Charter for Africa, with special reference to Part I Article 1 (a) and (b), Part III Article 6.1(a), 2(b) and Part V Articles 17-19,
• By the Lagos Plan of Action (1980) for the Economic Development of Africa,
• By the Final Report (27th April, 1982) of UNESCO’s Meeting of Experts on the “Definition of a Strategy for Promotion of African Languages”:

CONVINCED
That language is at the heart of a people’s culture and further convinced that, in accordance with the provisions of the Cultural Charter for Africa, the cultural advancement of the African peoples and the acceleration of their economic and social development will not be possible without harnessing in a practical manner indigenous African languages in that advancement and development;

CONVINCED
That, as in other spheres of her national life, Africa needs to assert her independence and identity in the field of language;

AWARE
That, up to the present, the majority of Member States have not taken the necessary practical steps to accord their indigenous languages their rightful official role as provided for by the Cultural Charter for Africa, the Lagos Plan of Action and other related resolutions of the Organization of African Unity;

RECOGNISING
That each sovereign state has the right to devise a language policy that reflects the cultural and socio-economic realities of its country, which is consonant or in close harmony with the needs and aspirations of its people;

CONVINCED
That the adoption and practical promotion of African languages as the official languages of the state is dependent primarily, and as matter of absolute imperative, on the political will and determination of each sovereign state;
CONVINCED
That the adoption and practical promotion of African languages as the official languages of the state are certain to have great advantages over the use of non-indigenous languages in democratising the process of formal education and involvement of the African populations in the political, cultural and economic affairs of their country;

AWARE
That illiteracy is an obstacle to the economic, cultural and social development of African countries and that mass literacy campaigns cannot succeed without the use of indigenous African languages;

AWARE
That, in recognition of the ever-growing interdependence and interaction at all levels of human endeavour and brotherhood of man, communication with the outside world beyond the boundaries of the African continent is inevitable and ought to be provided for or reflected in the language policies to be devised and implemented by each sovereign state;

CONVINCED
That the promotion of African languages, especially those that transcend national frontiers, is a vital factor in the cause of African Unity;

RECOGNISING
That, within Africa itself, the existence side by side in almost all African countries of several languages is a major fact of life and the knowledge that, because of this, multilingualism (i.e. the mastery and use of several languages by individuals for purpose of daily communication) is an equally dominant social feature of life in these countries, should induce Member States to make the promotion of multilingualism in their countries a prime consideration in the evolution of an appropriate language policy;

AGREE
To adopt the Language Plan of Action for Africa, as set out below:

Part I

Aims, objectives and principles
The aims and objectives of this Plan of Action are as follows:
a. To encourage each and every Member State to have a clearly defined language policy;
b. To ensure that all languages within the boundaries of Member States are recognised and accepted as a source of mutual enrichment;
c. To liberate the African peoples from undue reliance on the utilisation of non-indigenous languages as the dominant, official languages of the state in favour of the gradual take-over of appropriate and carefully selected indigenous African languages in this domain;
d. To ensure that African languages, by appropriate legal provision and practical promotion, assume their rightful role as the means of official communication in the public affairs of each Member State, in replacement of European languages, which have hitherto played this role;
e. To encourage the increased use African languages as vehicles of instruction at all educational levels;
f. To ensure that all the sectors of the political and socio-economic systems of each Member State is mobilised in such a manner that they play their due part in ensuring that the African language(s) prescribed as official language(s) assume their intended role in the shortest time possible;
g. To foster and promote national, regional and continental linguistic unity in Africa, in the context of the multilingualism prevailing in most African countries.

Part II

Priorities

a. Policy Formulation: Whether at the national, regional or continental levels, the selection and prescription without undue delay of certain viable national, regional or continental indigenous African languages as the official languages to be used for the formal official functions of the State, regional groupings or the OAU.
a. Implementation and Promotion: The subsequent implementation of the language policy adopted and the incorporation of the official African languages in the political, educational, social, cultural and economic lives of the people.
a. Modernisation: The modernisation as necessary and by any means required of the indigenous African languages selected and prescribed as official languages.
d. Mobilisation of Resources: The mobilisation of financial, human and other resources, and all relevant public and private institutions, in the practical promotion of the chosen official languages.

Part III

Programme of action (methods and means)
In order to fulfil the objectives set out in Part I, the African States solemnly subscribe to the following programme of action:
a. At continental level and as a concrete expression and demonstration of the OAU’s seriousness of purpose, the adoption without undue delay by the Organization of African Unity and the regional associations, organizations or institutions affiliated to it of viable indigenous African languages as working languages;

b. To encourage regional associations, organizations or institutions already accorded or those applying for observer status to the OAU to adopt indigenous African languages as their working languages;

c. At regional level, the adoption by regional groupings of viable, regional indigenous African languages as official or working languages;

d. At national level, the imperative need for each OAU Member State to consider it necessary and primary that it formulates with the minimum of delay a language policy that places an indigenous African language or language spoken and in active use by its peoples at the centre of its socio-economic development;

e. In order to fulfil the objectives in (d), the need by each Member State to establish a national language council, where none exists, or to strengthen it, where one already exists, as a national sounding board for the formulation of an appropriate national language policy;

f. The absolute necessity that each Member State, as a matter of supreme practical importance, follows up the formulation of an appropriate national language policy with an adequate and sustained allocation of the necessary financial and material resources, to ensure that the language or languages prescribed as official language(s) achieve(s) a level of modernisation that meets the needs of administering a modern State;

g. In recognition of the negative estimation in which indigenous African languages are generally held in Africa, by the general public, the necessity for each Member State, as part of its national programme of promoting those African languages duly prescribed as official languages, to mount a sustained campaign of educating or re-educating the national population about the inherent or potential practical utility of African languages to counter the present widespread negative attitudes in Africa towards these languages;

h. In recognition that the formal national education system plays a key role in the practical use of any language, the need for each Member State to ensure that all the sectors (i.e. primary, secondary and tertiary) of the national education system, are pressed as appropriate in the service of the practical promotion of the indigenous language(s) selected and prescribed as (an) official language(s);

i. Aware that African universities, research institutes and other institutions concerned with the study and promotion of African languages have a unique role to play in strengthening the role these languages play in the daily lives of the African peoples, the need for these institutions to strike a proper balance in future between the scientific study of the African languages and their actual use and practical promotion.

j. In connection with (i) above, the need for each Member State to render its national universities and other research and related institutions a primary instrument for the practical promotion of African languages, as regards such critical promotional activities, as the compilation of technical and general dictionaries, the writing of textbooks on useful subjects, the training of teachers of language, translators, interpreters, broadcasters and journalists, the production of useful books and other types of literature, relevant to the lives of contemporary Africans and the up-dating of vocabulary in African languages;

k. In recognition of the fact that to impart formal or other types of knowledge, the vehicle of instruction or communication should be a language familiar to the learner, the absolute necessity that each Member State should, as an essential part of its educational policy, prescribe as media or vehicles of instruction those indigenous African languages, that best and most effectively facilitate the learning process;

l. In recognition of the singularly strategic role widespread literacy among the national population plays, in the socio-economic development of a country, and recognising further that literacy education will be greatly facilitated and speeded up, if languages familiar to the national population are employed, the advisability of using indigenous African languages as media of instruction in national literacy campaigns mounted by Member States.

Preamble
We, Ministers and Heads of Delegations representing African states at the Intergovernmental Conference of Ministers in Language Policies in Africa, organized by unesco with the cooperation of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Francophone Agency (ACCT) through support of the Republic of Zimbabwe, having given due consideration to the views and recommendations of 51 government experts who met in Harare from the 17th to the 19th March 1997;
GUÍDADO

By the 28th session of the General Conference of UNESCO and the OAU Language Plan of Action for Africa;

COGNIZANT

Of the richness of the linguistic diversity in Africa and its potential as a resource for all types of development;

CONVINCED

Of the necessity and urgency for African States to adopt clear policies for the use and development of mother tongues as well as community languages, national, inter-African and international languages;

CONVINCED FURTHER

That the optimal use of African languages is a prerequisite for maximizing African creativity and resourcefulness in development activities;

AWARE

That the language policies introduced since independence have generally favoured the colonial languages by setting up language structures that confer a monopoly of status to the languages of former colonial powers;

FURTHER AWARE

That most of the recommendations previously made to correct this situation have not been implemented;

CONSIDERING

That only very few African states have clear and comprehensive language policies and that even fewer have enshrined the stipulations of such policies in their constitutions;

RECOGNISING

That language policy decisions are actually political decisions that can only be taken by national governments;

HEREBY DECLARE

Our total commitment to the realization of the following policy measures designed to correct the anomalies outlined above.

1. Vision For Africa

Although linguistic in nature, these commitments should be construed within the broader context of democratisation in Africa. The policy measures stated below are based on our continental vision of the Africa we aspire to have, namely:

(a) a democratic Africa that seeks to enhance the active participation of all citizens in all institutions - social, economic, political, et cetera;

(b) a democratic Africa where development is not construed in narrow economic goals but instead in terms of a culturally valued way of living together; and within a broader context of justice, fairness and equity for all; respect for linguistic rights as human rights, including those of minorities;
(c) in broader terms, Africa that acknowledges its ethno-linguistic pluralism and accepts this as a normal way of life and as a rich resource for development and progress;

(d) a democratic Africa that seeks to promote peaceful coexistence of a people in a society where pluralism does not entail replacement of one language or identity by another, but instead promotes complementarity of functions as well as cooperation and a sense of common destiny;

(e) Africa where democratisation in a pluralistic context seeks to produce through sound and explicit language policies Africans who are able to operate effectively at local levels as well as at regional and international levels;

(f) a democratic Africa that provides the environment for the promotion and preservation of an African identity as well as the cultivation of a proud and confident African personality;

(g) Africa where scientific and technological discourse is conducted in the national languages as part of our cognitive preparation for facing the challenges of the next millenium.

2. Guidelines for policy formulation

(a) All African language Policies should be those that enhance the chances of attaining the vision of Africa portrayed above.

(b) Each country should produce a clear Language Policy Document, within which every language spoken in the country can find its place.

(c) Guidelines for policy formulation should be sanctioned by legislative action.

(d) Every country’s policy framework should be flexible enough to allow each community to use its language side-by-side with other languages while integrating with the wider society, within an empowering language policy that caters for communication at local, regional and international levels.

(e) A language policy-formulating and monitoring institution/body should be established in each country.

3. Policy options

Each country/region should formulate its own policy on the basis of established needs and an informed awareness of its prevailing linguistic situation, as well [as] the language equipment of its citizens but within a general framework leading to a common vision. Such a policy should be arrived at by:

(a) determining the correct typology of a country’s language situation, and defining the statuses of the country’s various languages, taking into account their functions and the media (oral, written, electronic, etc.) in which they are used;
(b) establishing how many languages and language families there are in a given country, as well as what each is used for, who uses them, and people’s attitudes towards them;
(c) involving all concerned individuals and/or groups of individuals in the formulation and implementation of language policies;
(d) organizing follow-up and monitoring activities at national and regional levels in conjunction with such organizations as UNESCO, the OAU and ACCT.

4. Strategies for implementation

4.1. Pan-African level
In view of the policy needs stated above, African governments should individually and collectively:
(a) make declarations expressing clear policy statements, programme of tasks, and time-tables for implementation;
(b) acknowledge the fact that the language issue cuts across all sectors of national life;
(c) make use of language experts in formulating relevant language policies, state the guidelines Africa must adopt, and define the steps for their implementation;
(d) take into account and help develop human, material and technological resources in implementing the defined steps;
(e) re-activate the Language Plan for Africa and implement the decision taken in 1986 to make Kiswahili one of the working languages of OAU;
(f) adopt the Pan-African Project for Training and Educational Materials Production in African Languages (PATPAL), as contained in Appendix 1.
(g) request the OAU to take the necessary steps to ensure the adoption of the decisions and conclusions of the Accra meeting on Language in Education.

4.2. Regional level
At the regional level governments should:
(a) monitor policies and provide follow-up activities facilitated by international organizations, such as UNESCO and OAU;
(b) cooperate on matters of policy and resources for cross-border languages;
(c) develop regional/subregional languages;
(d) strengthen inter-African cooperation by having international languages taught across their zones of dominance;
(e) revitalise African language research institutions, and facilitate the formation and continued existence of the Pan African Association of Linguists.
4.3. Government level
African governments should individually and collectively:
(a) train language practitioners in the various professions and produce teaching and learning resources including those required for second-language teaching/learning;
(b) develop language databases and/or language banks at national and regional levels, as well as create channels for exchange of information and expertise on language matters;
(c) establish a central language planning service or institute to serve as a formal body charged with the responsibility for language issues such as translation services and compilation of terminologies;
(d) give economic and other practical forms of value to the languages by specifying language requirements for specific domains such as education, training, employment, and citizenship.

5. Commitments and appeals
In the furtherance of the policy objectives stated above, we, individually and collectively:
(a) commit ourselves to undertake as soon as possible the adequate preparation of language policies, taking into account the fundamental aspirations of our populations, the modern technological environment as well as the requirements of international life in our time;
(b) undertake to enhance the participation of all our national communities in the public life of our countries by guaranteeing them a hearing in whatever language they use to express their thoughts and feelings concerning public matters;
(c) urge all our citizens responsible for public, para-public and private institutions in the area of political, administrative and social life in our countries to recognize the fundamental need to respect the right of every human being to use the language of his or her choice;
(d) invite all international organizations, especially those involved in the areas of cooperation, education and culture, as well as financial organizations and institutions to give their support to the efforts and determination of our states to achieve development by means of dynamic language policies;
(e) appeal to regional African institutions to give increased support both to national language policies and to regional integration;
(f) encourage institutions and research departments involved in the initiation into and teaching of African languages to intensify and reinforce their activities in order to play a catalytic role in the global effort to achieve the development of Africa;
(g) appeal to all concerned in Africa and throughout the world to engage in a clear and forthright cooperation, with respect for the integrity of African identity and the harmonious promotion of human values and dignity as given expression in African languages;

(h) appeal to UNESCO to facilitate periodic meetings of government experts in order to evaluate how far the decisions and resolutions taken by this Conference have been implemented.

Appendix 1
Pan-African Project for Training and Educational Materials production in African Languages (PATPAL)

The project has the following four objectives:

1. A general objective, which is the attainment of a critical threshold in the training of personnel and the production of educational materials in African languages. Such a threshold is one from which the use of African languages as media and or co-media of instruction will become a normal practice in our educational systems.

2. Specifically, with regard to training this project should help develop in every country a body of professionals of various types and at all levels. These professionals should be acknowledgeable and effectively operational in the teaching of and in African languages as well as in the official foreign languages.

3. Also specifically, concerning the production of educational materials, the project should help develop at the national, regional and continental levels, effective systems of productions and distribution of high quality materials in African languages.

4. Finally, the project should set up an appropriate system of communication and coordination of its activities, which ensure an effective solidarity at the continental level among decision-makers and professionals.

The implementation of the project at the national level will be the responsibility of competent national teams made up of professionals who are already involved in the development and teaching of African languages. At the subregional or regional level, focal points will be identified to serve as practical references of the project. At the continental level, a technical coordination team made up of highly qualified professionals will be constituted.

The administrative structure at the continental level may involve institutions such as the OAU, UNESCO, OPS, UNICEF, NGOs, and other bilateral or multilateral cooperation institutions.

Institutions such as the OAU, UNESCO, OPS etc. may be called upon to sponsor, as from now, the implementation of this project. Equally, some of the bilateral and multilateral institutions, as well as NGOs present at this conference may be called upon to also help in the implementation in the project.

That any human society is necessarily governed by rules and principles based on traditions, languages, ways of life and thought in other words on a set of cultural values, which reflect its distinctive character and personality;

CONVINCED

That any human society is necessarily governed by rules and principles based on culture; and that culture should be regarded as the set of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features of society or a social group, and that it encompasses, in addition to art and literature, lifestyles, ways of living together, value systems, traditions and beliefs, (1)

Revised version of the Cultural Charter for Africa (1976), the text of which can be accessed at http://ocpa.irmo.hr/resources/docs/Cultural_Charter-en.pdf

Adopted by the first session of the AU Conference of ministers of culture (Nairobi from the 13th to the 14th December 2005. The Compendium contains an abridged version of the Plan of Action.

I. Preamble
This Plan of Action is an updated version of the Dakar Plan of Action on Cultural Industries, which was adopted in 1992 by the OAU Heads of State and Government. Given the long period of time that elapsed since its adoption and given changing local, regional and global realities that influence the production, distribution and consumption of cultural goods and services, the African Union Commission deemed it necessary to update the Plan of Action and Revitalize the cultural industries. The revised Plan has been submitted to the 1st Session of the Conference of African Ministers of Culture, which was held in December 2005 in Nairobi, Kenya. The Ministers considered the Draft and adopted it in principle but requested the AU Commission to refine the document taking into account the ongoing and emerging issues in culture and other fields of social development. Thus the present Draft is informed by all programmes and conventions on cultural development adopted by different Pan-African and International institutions including the Copenhagen World Summit on Social Development; the UN Declaration of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), the Johannesburg World Summit on Sustainable Development in 2002; the UNESCO Convention on the Promotion and the Protection of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions; the Vision, Mission and Strategic Orientation of the AU Commission (2004-2007); the AU Charter on the Cultural Renaissance of Africa fora as well as the various instruments in different sectors of culture including African languages, tangible and intangible heritages, and African values. Moreover, the Plan of Action also draws from the key priority areas of the AU Commission for the next four (4) years as outlined by the new leadership of the Commission.

II. Introduction

Cultural Industries are defined by UNESCO as those industries which produce tangible or intangible artistic and creative outputs, and which have a potential for wealth creation and income generation through the exploitation of cultural assets and production of knowledge-based goods and services (both traditional and contemporary). In broader terms, the cultural industries also include: advertising; architecture; crafts; designer furniture; fashion clothing; film, video and other audiovisual production; graphic design; educational and leisure software; live and recorded music; performing arts and entertainment; television, radio and internet broadcasting; visual arts and antiques; and writing and publishing.

The UNESCO definition clearly indicates that the term “cultural industries” is almost interchangeable with the concept of “creative industries.” Whereas the notion of “cultural industries” emphasizes those industries whose inspiration derives from heritage, traditional knowledge, and the artistic elements of creativity, the notion of “creative industries” places emphasis on the individual and his or her creativity, innovation, skill and talent in the exploitation of intellectual property.

3) Ensure that RECs which form the cornerstone of the African Cultural Common Market, continue to develop and support within their respective Secretariats, departments responsible for cultural development in general and cultural and creative industries in particular.

4) Ensure also that the specific character of cultural and creative industries is acknowledged and where necessary the statutes, protocols and other texts establishing or governing the activities of these organisations will be amended.

5) Establish agreements among African states with a view to creating a common market for audio visual and literary productions.

6) Collaborate in developing joint investment ventures.

7) Disseminate the Plan of Action to the concerned stakeholders to ensure implementation.

International Cooperation

8) Make concrete efforts to inform and sensitise the partner international organisations such as UNESCO, UNDP, UNIDO, ECA, WIPO, WTO, ITU, ILO, UNU, GATT, UNCTAD; EECACP, Commonwealth Secretariat, Agence Intergouvernementale de la Francophonie, EU-ACP, The Arab league Lusophone organisation,

9) Encourage them to take active part in the development, promotion and trade of African cultural and creative products and services

10) Create an African World Fund for the Cultural and Creative Industries similar to the Africa World Heritage Fund;

11) Prepare co-production and co-distribution agreements to ensure the penetration of African cultural products into international markets, while ensuring full respect for the intellectual property rights for African artists and designers and develop strategies to promote cultural industries in the context of development strategies and priorities by locating these strategies at sub-national and local levels.

12) Recognise that across the cultural industries there are measures that could be adopted to improve the performance and viability of these industries even where they are only partially developed and not yet part of the mainstream economy. These measures include
   • Enhance the capacity of existing institutions.
   • Foster entrepreneurship training and adopt appropriate measures to increase access to private investment and financing opportunities for the development of cultural and creative industries through mechanisms such as Guaranteed Funds, joint ventures and tax incentives
• Make full use of development instruments such as the UNESCO’s Convention on the Promotion and Protection of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions and the Aid for Trade mechanism.

_African and international financing agencies_

13) In addition to financial assistance for the administrative structures of the political authorities and for technical studies, special effort will be made to prepare and present to the financing agencies viable projects drawn from the Plan of Action.

14) Build partnership with development finance institutions in Africa such as Development Bank of Southern Africa (DBSA), Africa Development Bank (ADB) and bilateral donors to establish financial mechanisms for both mitigating and reducing the cultural sector risks as well as promoting the production and trade in cultural goods and services.

15) Elaborate visibly, economically rewarding cultural industry projects with a view to submitting them to national or international funding agencies, public or private, as well as to multilateral organisations for cooperation development aid.

_VIII. Timeframe and phases_

Periodicity or phase-by-phase approach is an important component of any action plan in order to guide concrete actions within specified time frame. This Plan should be divided into three phases:

Phase 1: Advocacy, Sensitization and Laying the Foundations.

a) Create awareness and advocate for the implementation of the Plan at national, subregional and continental levels;

b) Establish the necessary institutional structures as well as infrastructures for the promotion of cultural and creative industries;

c) Assess the level of implementation of the Dakar Plan of Action with the emphasis on the lessons learnt and best practices to be shared;

d) Identify centers of excellence within the continent and strengthen their capacity for continued better performance;

e) Create an enabling environment to strengthen the collaboration with various actors and stakeholders;

f) Establish and build the capacity of PACI as mentioned above;

g) Create a network of producers of cultural goods and services; establish a regular consultative forum through which they exchange ideas, experiences and address common challenges together;

h) Strengthen the stewardship role of the AUC, the RECS and other organs of the African Union, including the Pan African Parliament (PAP) in promoting and protecting the cultural industries and advocating for a fair access to international markets for these goods and services.

Phase 2: Promote cultural industries as key contributors to sustainable development of African countries

a) Identify existing cultural and creative industries and their potentials as well as constraints;
b) Address their manpower, financial, and other resource needs of local producers;
c) Identify market opportunities and provide information as well as tax incentives to local investors in the cultural industries,
d) Establish databases and means of information sharing, particularly using the new information and communication technologies;
e) Build the capacity of producers/creators of cultural goods and services through training, regular workshops and other mechanisms

a) Develop standardization tools and instruments to ensure competitiveness and marketability of cultural goods and services;
b) Elaborate codes of conduct for in the manufacturing, transaction and consumption of cultural goods and services,
c) Ensure transparency and accountability at all levels

IX. Monitoring and evaluation

1) Monitoring and evaluation go hand in hand with well formulated and verifiable indicators. It is therefore essential that stakeholders at all levels put in place appropriate mechanisms for monitoring and evaluation. These mechanisms should be adapted to the needs and problems of a cultural industry. It should also be an ongoing process and flexible in approach. Each sector of the cultural industry and each individual or group actor should put parameters of achieving certain targets, as well as setting the targets themselves.

2) Specific actions to be undertaken.
   (a) Establish implementation, follow up, monitoring and evaluation mechanisms for policies and operational programmes.
   (b) Designate focal structures for follow up activities and involving African institutions, the African stakeholders, UN Agencies, the bilateral partnerships and the international community in mobilization of Human, technical and financial resources.
   (c) Develop verifiable performance indicators for the development of the cultural industries;
(d) Assist the different sectors of the industries in planning, organizing and managing small-scale enterprises for the promotion, protection, and distribution of goods and services;
(e) Build the capacity of individuals, groups or associations/institutions in their Endeavour to achieve concrete results in respective cultural occupations, and
(f) Update indicators regularly in order to use new methods and best practices.

X. Role of stakeholders
The effective implementation of the Plan of Action depends on a clearly defined division of labor and commitment of relevant stakeholders. In this regard the following institutions are expected to play pivotal role in the promotion and protection of the cultural and creative industries.

A. The african union
The African Union, among others, will.
• Advocate for the implementation of the plan of Action at national, regional and international levels:
• Facilitate monitoring and evaluation on the status of implementation of the Plan, Create appropriate fora for the exchange of experiences and best practices,
• Encourage Africa’s development partners, member states and the private sector to invest in the promotion of the cultural and creative industries

B. Regional economic communities (RECs)
Regional Economic Communities are pillars of the African Union and as such could play vital role in the promotion of cultural and creative industries. Among others, they could:
• Encourage Member States to harmonize and coordinate their respective national policies on the development of the cultural and creative industries;
• Facilitate capacity building programmes (training, workshop, etc) to artists, creators, managers, decision-makers in the cultural and creative industries.
• Facilitate monitoring and evaluation

C. Member states
Member States have to
• Create favorable policy and legal/institutional framework for the promotion of cultural and creative industries;
• Allocate adequate resources for the development of the cultural sector in general and the cultural industries in particular,
• Establish standardization and quality assurance mechanisms,
• Create the necessary infrastructure for the development of the cultural and creative industries,
• Encourage linkages between the private and public sectors and between rural and urban areas.

D. Pan african cultural institutions
Pan African cultural institutions are the key stakeholders and are expected to.
• Provide technical and expertise support to individuals, groups and institutions engaged in the production and promotion of the cultural and creative industries,
• Create local and regional fora for the exchange of ideas and experiences,
• Facilitate training and capacity building activities for local and national cultural practitioners

XI. Conclusion
The success and sustained implementation of this Plan of Action requires a clear repositioning of the Africa Union’s leadership role and building of broad partnerships at all levels such as with Pan African, national, regional, and international institutions as well as professional federations, associations and guilds, NGOs, CSOs, SBOs and the private sector. The implementation of the identified key priority areas in the Plan of Action, if managed in a conducive environment, with effective strategies, adequate resources and well developed programmes, can create a high potential for job creation and in the development of the creative and cultural sector.

Members States are therefore called upon to identify their priorities according to their national conditions and specificities, their development status, as well as their human resources, financial and national resources and institutional capacities.

3.8. Introductory report of the african union commission on previous sessions of the conference of african ministers of culture and programmes of the commission (2005)
(Information document - 1ST Session of the African Union Conference of Ministers of Culture (10th-14th December 2005 Nairobi, Kenya)
1. It is customary for the Current Chairperson of the Ministerial Conference to present an activity report to his peers. However, in view of the long lapse between the 4th Session of the Conference of African Ministers of Culture held in Cotonou, Benin, in 1993 and the present session, the Commission took the initiative upon itself to present a detailed report to the Conference. This report therefore makes a critical review of:

- the conclusions of the four previous sessions of the Conference;
- the programmes and activities initiated or developed individually or collectively since 1993 by the OAU/AU, its Member States, African and international organizations or private stakeholders;
- the new vistas opened to Africa at the initiative of the Commission or other main cultural development stakeholders in Africa.

2. The aim is to inform the circles concerned and enable them, where possible, to draw the necessary inspiration to pursue certain initiatives, correct those that need to be reviewed or make the necessary radical changes at a time when the new Commission of the AU takes charge of the Conference for a new beginning with new players and new structures within the context of the vision, mission and strategic plan.

3. Naturally, the proposed critical review is far from being exhaustive. The Commission invites all the actors and participants to contribute to this review so as to come up with a comprehensive document that allows for an accurate assessment of the achievements and shortcomings of the last two decades since 1986. The Commission among other things plans to conduct an inventory and a more systematic evaluation of the major cultural organizations, associations and events in Africa with a view to a harmonization, networking and rationalization of its relations with the major stakeholders of cultural development.

1. Conferences of african ministers of culture

4. The first conference, which brought together Ministers of Culture was the Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies in Africa (africacult). It was held in Accra, Ghana, from the 27th October to the 6th November 1975 by unesco in cooperation with the OAU.

5. That conference formed part of a series of regional conferences held in Helsinki for Europe, Djakarta for Asia and Bogota for Latin America etc, aimed at preparing the World Conference on Cultural Policies held in Mexico in August 1982.

6. As well as preparing Africa for the World Conference in Mexico, the Accra Conference helped in no small measure in addressing the recurrent squabbles over cultural ideologies, which greatly divided theoreticians, thinkers and cultural circles in general. It was in Accra for the first time that the concept of African cultural identity was unanimously adopted, in replacement of the concepts of Negritude, Authenticity or African Personality used here and there to point to African specificity.

7. The Accra Conference also afforded the opportunity to present a draft cultural Charter for Africa, which was later, finalized and adopted in Mauritius by the OAU Heads of State and Government in July 1976.

I. First Conference of African Ministers of Culture of the OAU
(Port Louis, Mauritius, March 1986)
8. It was in recognition of the important role played by Mauritius where was adopted the Cultural Charter for Africa ten years later that that country accepted to host the First session of the Conference of African Ministers of Culture of the OAU.

9. That maiden and constituent session defined the functions of the Conference thus (article 3 of the Rules of Procedure of the Conference):
   The Conference shall examine all matters pertaining to cultural development in Africa, the promotion of exchanges and cultural cooperation among African countries on the one hand, between Africa and the rest of the world on the other, in conformity with the objectives of the Cultural Charter for Africa.
   More specifically, its functions are:
   a) To define the general orientations of the OAU general cultural plan.
   b) Coordinate the activities of the sub-regional, regional and pan-African cultural institutions.
   c) Prepare and coordinate the participation of Africa in international organisations whose activities coincide with African cultural problems.

10. Another procedural point adopted by the Conference was to point out that the meeting shall hold every two years and that the Bureau shall meet once between sessions.

11. The agenda of the Conference was on African Cultural Cooperation and the preparation of a plan referred to as Port Louis Plan of Action.

12. Besides the Rule creating the Conference, the most significant outcomes were:
   a) The adoption of a Linguistic Plan of Action for Africa;
   b) The adoption of Kiswahili as a working language of the OAU;
   c) The drafting of the Port Louis Plan of Action
   d) The message of H.E. El Hadji Omar Bongo, President of the Republic of Gabon, proposing, for the first of its kind, the creation of an African Cultural Market. The all-new idea was certainly to develop African cultural products, which have an economic value and also to organize intra-African exchange on these products. The initiative for a book exchange was also underway in some Latin American countries. This very attractive idea led notably to initiatives in favour of cultural diversity and Cultural Industries. It also spurred economists who, not to be left behind, began work on the African Economic Community.

II. The second session of the Conference of African Ministers of Culture (Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso, March 1988).
13. The theme of this Conference was: Africa and the World Decade for Cultural Development (1988 - 1997). It saw significant developments in the ideas initiated at Port Louis, especially:
   a) The deepening of the concept of a Cultural Common Market and the development of initiatives on Cultural Industries with, among others things, the recommendation to organize meetings, manifestations, exhibitions and fairs based on the economic value of cultural products;
   b) the Resolution on the creation of an Institute of Black Peoples;
   c) tribute paid to Mr. Amadou Mahtar Mbow, Director General of UNESCO, first African (from Senegal) to manage a United Nations Agency;
   d) the Resolution to create a Great African Museum in Algiers;
   e) the convening of the first (and only) meeting of African Cultural Organizations in Lomé, Togo.

III. The third session of the Conference, May 1990, Yaounde, Cameroon
14. The general theme of the Conference was: “The Organization of African Cultural Space”. The original idea from Lomé in 1988 at the meeting of African Cultural Organizations was: “After the liberalization of the political space, the time had come to organize the cultural and economic landscapes”.

15. At this session the following were discussed:
   a) The crucial problem of financing culture in Africa;
   b) The preparation of a Protocol on Culture to be annexed to the Treaty creating the African Economic Community;
   c) The successful conclusion of initiatives on Cultural Industries with many meetings, studies and initiatives in this area;
   d) The systematization and adoption of the Port Louis Plan of Action under the form of a Medium Term Plan of Action, based on the UNESCO model;
   e) The innovation taken over later by SADC and NEPAD, which consisted of charging Member States to implement cultural projects, with the creation of 5 technical commissions, each presided over by one of the Member Countries of the Bureau of the Conference;
f) The creation of regional museums in place of the Great African Museum in Algiers as previously proposed in Ouagadougou;
g) The idea of a Cultural Atlas for Africa;
h) The launching of the OAU Cultural Fund.

IV. The fourth session of the Conference, June 1993, Cotonou, Benin

16. It was from 1993 that initiatives for a more or less profound restructuring of the OAU secretariat were born, and which led, ten years later, to the creation of the African Union. Thus with the motive of rationalizing the activities of the OAU, it was decided that the Conference of the Ministers of Culture and that of the Ministers of Education should merge into one. The Cotonou Conference therefore held under the general theme of: “Culture, Education and Development”. It was attended both by the Ministers of Culture and those of Education, and matters of interest to the two sectors were discussed.

17. The Bureau of the Conference was composed as follows:
Chair: Benin
1st Vice - Chair: Namibia
2nd Vice Chair: Djibouti
3rd Vice Chair: Mozambique
4th Vice Chair: Republic of Congo
5th Vice Chair: Tunisia Rapporteur: Senegal.

18. However, because of the heaviness of operation, no important issue was discussed in-depth and this session finally dampened the spirit of the CAMC, which had enjoyed ascendancy from 1986 to 1990. Subsequently, new restructuring of the secretariat; reduction in personnel; the failure of the country, which had opted to host the 5th session; the launching of the Education Decade, which tasked the same authority charged both with Culture and Education, all finally led to the death of the Conference. It nevertheless proposed, among other things, the following:
• The creation of a literary Prize;
• The creation of an African film library in Ouagadougou;
• The celebration on the 7th November of each year as the African Writer’s Day.

2. Critical review of outcomes and indirect effects of the conference of ministers of culture

19. The Conference served as an important forum for meetings and exchanges, which helped to give birth and impetus to ideas and major projects; it was a structure through which problems of common interest to professionals, Member States, regional communities, and other parts of the world were debated within a pan-African framework, thus building a African consensus prior to international debates. Consequently, even if the OAU secretariat lacked the financial and human resources to implement adopted resolutions, the Conferences enabled the formulation of projects and programmes many of which were implemented, while others, which are still relevant are still waiting to be executed.

20. It was well in keeping with the dynamics of Pan-African Conferences that the inspiring ideas were formulated, which took the form of some of the projects and programmes implemented between 1986 and 2005, namely:

- The Linguistic Plan of Action for Africa;
- The adoption of Kiswahili as a working language of the OAU;
- The development of studies and initiatives, which led to the adoption of the Dakar Plan of Action on Cultural Industries;
- The Monrovia Symposium on Africa’s Development Prospects by the year 2000;
- The Pan-African Music Festival (FESPAM) in Brazzaville, Congo;
- The Pan-African Dance Festival (FESPAD) in Kigali, Rwanda;
- PANAFAEST in Ghana;
- The Pan-African Arts and Music Festival (PAFAM) in Ghana (1990);
- The Abidjan Theatre Arts Market (MASA);
- The Ouagadougou International Arts and Crafts Fair, SIAO;
- International Theatre Festival of Benin (FITHEB);
- The Dakar Biennial of African Contemporary Art of CICIBA in Libreville and East Africa (rotating);
- The Koras in South Africa and Ngwomo Africa in Kinshasa;
- The establishment of associations and networks such as the Transafricaine des Arts, the Senegalese Association for the promotion of Cultural Industries (ASEPIC), and the Congolese Society for the promotion of Cultural Industries (SOCODIC);
- The Harare and Zanzibar Film Festivals;
- The establishment of cultural offices and services in Regional Economic Communities (ECOWAS, SADC, CEN-SAD, WAEMU);
- The Symposium on Financing Culture in Africa, in Abidjan;
- The Fashion Festival in Niger;
- The establishment of the Afro-Arab Cultural Institutes in Bamako;
- The launching of the OAU Cultural Fund and the institution of the OAU Award at the Ouagadougou (FESPACO), Mogadishu (MOGPAFIS) and Tunis (JCC) Film Festivals;
- The establishment or revival of Pan-African Associations of Writers; of anthropologists, historians and archaeologists;
- Book Fairs, namely in Harare;
- The establishment of the Observatory of Cultural Policies in Africa (OCPA) and the African Publishers Network (APNET);
• The uncompleted Cultural Atlas of Africa and an Educational Guide to African Citizenship;
• The Convening of the Conference of Intellectuals of Africa and the Diaspora in 1996 and 2004;
• The OAU/AU diplomatic offensives, which accompanied the efforts of Ethiopia and Botswana, which led to the return of the Axum Obelisk to Ethiopia and the Nègre empaillé (stuffed Negro) of the Banyoles Museum in Spain;
• The launching of the EU/AU programme for the return or restitution of African cultural goods that are in Europe;
• The establishment or strengthening of structures or centres of excellence in charge of heritage such as the Porto Novo Ecole du Patrimoine (EPA) in Benin, the Programme for the Development of Museums in Africa (PMDA) in Mombassa, Kenya, AFRICOM in Nairobi, Kenya, WAMP in Dakar, Senegal, the taking of intangible African culture treasures, as well as their producers and bearers, into consideration;
• The establishment and the activities of the Mobile College for Culture and Development;
• Studies and initiatives on the Cultural Dimension of Development (cultural indicators, NEPAD, etc);
• The establishment of the African Academy of Languages;
• The completion of the preparation of the General History of Africa, the beginning of the Slavery Route and Iron Route projects;
• OAU/Partners meetings devoted to copyright and intellectual property in Bissau (1981), Mauritius (1987) and Abidjan (1998);
• The establishment and strengthening of the African Department in UNESCO;
• The convening of Audience Africa (1995) and the Seminar on Forward-Looking Approaches and Innovative Strategies to Promote the Development of Africa (2002);
• The awarding of the Nobel Prize for Literature to eminent Africans;
• The recent holding of the Heritage Committee in South Africa;
• The proliferation of arts and crafts galleries in African cities and elsewhere in the world;
• The unprecedented development of African music and theatre arts in Africa and the world;
• The development of research and studies and centres of excellence such as CODESRIA and OSSREA;
• The organization of meetings on culture and development in Africa by the World Bank (1993), UNICEF and the ADB (1994);
• UNESCO/OAU Pan-African Consultation in 1998 in Lomé, Togo to prepare the Inter-Governmental Conference on Culture and Development; the UNESCO/OAU Inter-Governmental Conference on Linguistic Policies in Africa, in Harare and the OAU/UNESCO Seminar on Oral Traditions in Southern Africa;
- The establishment or development of Africa Houses worldwide, particularly in London, Paris, Tokyo, Brazil, etc; the mobilization of the African Diasporas, the resurgence of Pan-Africanism and the emergence of the African Renaissance ideology, the taking into consideration of intangible treasures and their bearers, keepers and producers, etc.

21. In spite of this profusion of initiatives, the following should however be deplored:
- the demise of the African Cultural Institute (ACI), of the Mogadishu Film Festival (MOGPAFIS), the closing of the Inter-African Language Bureau (OAU Office formerly established in Kampala, Uganda), the inertia of the Institute of Black Peoples, of the African Encyclopaedia and the EACROTANAL and CERDOTOLA Centres of Zanzibar and Yaoundé respectively, in charge of oral tradition and African languages, the inertia also of the CRAC regional training centre in Lomé or of URTNA (TV) in Nairobi, the non-establishment by UNESCO of a Regional Office for Culture in Africa;
- the failure to establish the Great Museum in Algiers, the unsuccessful project of reparations to Africa for damages suffered due to slave trade, the closing of the Niamey Museology Training Centre, the inertia of the African Cultural Society and the “Présence Africaine” publishers, the failure of the struggle against piracy and illicit trafficking in works of art;
- the failure to convene the African Millennium Summit “Africa in the Year 2000”, the inertia but also the revival of the International Centre of Bantu Civilizations (CICIBA), failure to hold the 3rd World Festival of Black Arts after Dakar 1966 and FESTAC 77 in Lagos. The non-renewal of studies in Egyptology.

22. However, above all, players in the area of cultural development in Africa are accused of having placed too much emphasis since 1975 on the theme of affirmation of cultural identity, to the detriment of plurality. 30 years later, the consequence would be the return of tribalism and ethnicity in the political arena, the exacerbation of identity demands symbolized by “Ivoirity”, the result of which would be the genocide in Rwanda as well as the crisis in Côte d’Ivoire, The Sudan, in countries neighbouring the Sahara, countries of the Great Lakes Region, etc. All this, against a background of theories on clashes of civilizations.

It is within the framework of undeniable positive achievements but equally of failures and major challenges that the African Union was established.

23. The gestation and emergence of the African Union itself were undeniably made possible through the development of a current of very dense ideas, which crossed then fermented to culminate, like in 1963, with the inception of the AU. This is also why the Commission intends to reactivated these major meetings and major Pan-African Cultural Institutions, which sustained the initiatives of integration and renaissance.

24. In this connection, the recent Conference of Intellectuals and the proposed Pan-African Cultural Congress are only the first milestones of a long list of initiatives and projects, which the Commission intends to implement within the framework of the Vision, Mission and Strategic Plan it defined.

3. New fields of activity of the commission
25. The challenges, which the Commission has to help take up are numerous: Globalisation, conflicts, political and economic crises, national construction, African integration, good governance, coexistence of multiple and sometimes conflicting identities in the same national or regional space, fundamentalism, terrorism, intolerance, discrimination, democratisation, promotion of human rights and freedoms, etc.

26. Each of these challenges calls for, among others, one or several responses falling within culture in its broad sense. The cultural challenges themselves call for actions, which behove upon the Commission to implement in concert with the African and international actors and partners. It is within this perspective that the projects and programmes are considered in the following fields, particularly:

a. the definition of a shared vision, education about African citizenship with the preparation of appropriate teaching modules particularly in history, the preparation of a Pan-African Manual of Civic Education, programmes on diversity and pluralism, contribution to conflict resolution, promotion of knowledge and mutual understanding.

b. The development of activities and centres of excellence in the field of material and immaterial heritage, the fight against piracy and illegal trafficking, the protection of knowledge, the traditional know-how and “living libraries”.

c. The promotion of African languages in teaching and in development activities, a language policy, which gives place to foreign languages, the implementation of the African Academy of Languages.

d. The promotion of international cultural cooperation, the promotion of cultural diversity, dialogue or alliance between civilisations, the rationalisation and development of relations between African and its diasporas, the establishment or development of Africa Centres or Houses in the strategic areas of the world in order to ensure an actual African presence in the world.
e. The contribution to the definition and implementation of national cultural policies, the establishment, strengthening or reactivation of coordination structures, encouragement of cultural cooperation and development, the consideration of youths, women and workers in the implementation of cultural programmes, the establishment of a Pan-African Cultural Institute likely to harmonise the cultural projects and networking of cultural organizations and associations in Africa and mitigate the lack of services at the appropriate level at the Headquarters of the Commission, the establishment of a Pan-African Confederation of Professional Associations, the establishment of an advisory African Cultural Council.

f. A vigorous policy aimed at ensuring a cultural development likely to enable Africa make its contribution to the world schools of thought, ideas, intellectual and aesthetic productions, which mould the destiny of mankind and therefore an active support for the productions and the distribution of cultural products through an effective utilisation of the ICT: development of research, publications, literature including children literature, development of films and audio-visual products, music, performing arts, handicraft and life style (fashion, dress, clothes) etc.

g. The preparation of the status of the unexecuted major projects and the consideration of the possible contribution of the AU, the support to the main cultural institutions and events, which are both fora for exchange of views, which encourage integration and also venues for the show of the vitality of the African Cultural Production, the establishment of major AU prizes of recognition and consecration in critical areas of creativity and innovation.

h. The contribution of culture to the resolution of problems and challenges of development: AIDS, political, economic and social crises, environment, democratisation, good governance, etc.

27. There are so many fields and areas in which the Commission intends to invest in the coming months and years to guarantee a cultural development commensurate with the major stakes and also opportunities for Africa and the world. It is the time for action. Consequently, the Commission wants to own and disseminate across the continent the watchword of Prof. Joseph Ki Zerbo of Burkina Faso. After having “theorised” a lot about culture, it is henceforth indispensable to “establish infrastructure for culture in Africa”.

Fully aware of the constructive contribution made by various multi-national African experiments in economic and social cooperation to the continental integration called for by the Charter,

After having taken note of the Administrative Secretary-General’s report on the conclusions of various meetings of experts jointly organized by ECA and OAU on various economic and social problems;

Taking into account the difficulties in the preparation of surveys required by the Specialized Committees to which reference is made in various reports by the Administrative Secretary-General,

2. AHG/Decl.2(XXI)

Declaration of the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity on the Cultural aspects in the Lagos Plan of Action

We, Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), assembled in our Twenty-first Ordinary Session, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, from the 18th to the 20th July, 1985,

Recalling our Resolution AHG/Res. 132 (XX) adopted at the Twentieth Ordinary Session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the OAU held in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in November 1984, on Africa’s economic problems, Recalling the objectives of the Lagos Plan of Action and the Final Act of Lagos, Recalling the objectives of the African Cultural Charter adopted by the 1976 OAU Summit in Port Louis, Mauritius, Recalling the Constitution of the Inter-African Cultural Fund adopted by the 1980 Freetown Summit,

Having taken note of the Report of the OAU Secretary-General a.i. on the Cultural Aspects of the Lagos Plan of Action contained in Document CM/1317 (XLII), Conscious of the need to align cultural development with the economic development of Africa,

Aware of the fact that the success of the Lagos Plan of Action and the Final Act of Lagos depends on the results of analyses of the inter-action between culture and the other social and economic sectors,

Desirous of facilitating the integration of human factors, cultural realities and the system of values into development strategies,

Desirous of formulating administrative and technical measures for the integration of cultural data into the Lagos Plan of Action,

Recognizing the need to lend political support for the success of the forthcoming World Cultural Development Decade:

HAVE DECLARED as follows:

1. WE NOTE WITH SATISFACTION and ENDORSE the principle of the United Nations General Assembly’s Proclamation of a World Cultural Development Decade, to be celebrated under the auspices of the United Nations and UNESCO;
2. WE RECOGNIZE that following the AFRICACULT and MONDIACULT, in accordance with the relevant recommendations of the Pan-African Cultural Manifesto of Algiers and the provisions of the African Cultural Charter, they adopted in Port Louis, Mauritius in 1976, the following:
   a. Priority should be given to the role of culture as an essential dimension of the global development process, which should, however not be solely aimed at economic growth. In this connection, there is an urgent need to integrate social and cultural factors within our development strategies so as to ensure a balanced and self-reliant development;
   b. development should thus take its root from our people’s culture and be consistent with their values so as to emancipate them from them from all forms of economic, social, political and cultural dependence;
   c. cultural identities, as dynamic process of continuity, creativity and attitudes vis-à-vis innovation, should be the basis and finality of development, promoting and safeguarding stability and structural cohesion, as well as the social development of peoples;

3. WE ARE CONVINCED that these guidelines will help achieve in the near future:
   a. improvement of the standard of living of peoples and ensuring their social progress through the development of their creativity; particularly thanks to their participation;
   b. the creation of an African conscience maintained by a sense of belonging to the same identity process, strengthening by the mutual search for an African unity and sustained by an unflinching political will to succeed in the context of an African cultural community;
   c. the affirmation of the existence and strengthening of the Member States’ cultural identities and the community reality of African unity in international exchanges by developing a more balanced bilateral and international cultural cooperation.

4. WE HAVE DECIDED to pool our efforts in the continent of the Lagos Plan of Action, so as to implement the short, medium and long term integrated programmes of activities, relevant to the above fields. These are integrated programmes because they are linked to other economic development sectors, already provided for in the Plan. However, they will particularly contribute to enhancing the self-development of peoples and stimulate their spirit of adaptability and their creativity.

   This involves the following areas:
   - Scientific research (social and human science)
   - Education and literacy programmes
   - Cultural industries;
• Cottage industries, arts and crafts;
• Cultural exchanges and the development of tourism;
• Cultural cooperation.

5. WE COMMIT OURSELVES, individually and collectively, to formulate national policies on the various areas, which will define and underscore the specific cultural development objectives as well as the conditions and methods for their implementation. The national cultural policies thus defined would be harmonized at the regional and sub-regional levels within the context of the Lagos Plan of Action.

6. WE COMMIT OURSELVES, individually and collectively, to take the appropriate measures to formulate and make known within the next three years (1985 - 1988), national cultural policies, which will take into account the above cited cultural objectives, and which will spell out carefully the cultural development as well as the economic development programme with a view to facilitate their co-ordination and harmonization at the regional and sub-regional levels;

7. WE ESPECIALLY, COMMIT OURSELVES individually and collectively to:
   a. accord an important place to the promotion of scientific research for cultural development;
   b. give priority to the promotion of education for development;
   c. promote the development of cultural industries;
   d. promote traditional cottage industries;
   e. ensure cultural exchange and the development of cultural tourism;
   f. take the necessary steps to promote cooperation for cultural development:
      • at Inter-African level;
      • at International level;

8. In adoption this Declaration, WE HAVE THE FIRM CONVICTION that the development of our countries and our continent will:
   a) further take into consideration the social and cultural realities;
   b) enable OAU to harmonize our national policies, define common priorities and thus, become a focal point of all sub-regional activities in the field of cultural, scientific and technical cooperation for development;

9. HAVING DECIDED to focus attention on the cultural aspects of the Lagos Plan of Action, we request the Secretary-General of the OAU in consultation with the UNESCO Director-General, and the Heads of African Cultural Institutions to prepare and to submit to us annually the relevant programmes accordingly.

4.1.7. Declarations and Resolutions adopted by the Twenty-Ninth Ordinary Session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government at its Twenty-Ninth Ordinary Session, 28th-30th June 1993, Cairo, Egypt

AHG/Decl.1 (XXIX)
1993 Cairo declaration on the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of the Organization of African Unity

1. We, the OAU Heads of State and Government while celebrating the Thirtieth Anniversary of the OAU, recall with pride and esteem the historical role of the founding fathers of the Organization, their wisdom, clear vision and the historical heritage they bequeathed to us.

2. They had indeed been in the forefront of the historical achievements of the National Liberation Movements and in the vanguard of the struggle against colonialism and racial discrimination by founding the OAU within the framework of interaction between civilizations and institutional unity despite the cultural, linguistic, religious and national diversity. This is the everlasting great heritage, which shall always guide us in our future endeavours.

3. To them we express our gratitude and appreciation. We also salute the peoples of Africa as a whole, particularly the gallant freedom fighters for their sacrifices and efforts in the struggle for freedom, equality, prosperity and development.

4. The Thirtieth Anniversary provides an opportunity for us to ponder over the experiences of the past and look forward with hope, determination and optimism to the day when the leaders of Africa will meet once again to celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of the OAU in 20 years time.

5. A positive projection of Africa’s future requires the assessment of its past performance as well as the achievements and its shortcomings and the difficulties it has encountered. It also requires from us the renewal of our common determination and will to face the current challenges. We have indeed made achievements and with regard to the obstacles and the challenges, they have been identified in the resolutions we have adopted at various gatherings and in the declarations and other relevant documents.
in which our vision and strategies geared towards the achievements of our goals and objectives, are elaborated. We are also committed to the adoption of common positions by consensus and to the continental unity of our peoples and nations who live in different regions, territories and islands with diverse cultural backgrounds.

6. These documents in their entirety reflect our view on such issues as independence, security, cooperation, development, economic integration, the need for collective self-reliance in achieving the overall development of our continent, promotion of human and peoples rights and our ability to foresee the trend of the fundamental changes taking place in our contemporary world in the political and economic fields as well as in the area of information and communication between peoples and nations. We have also, with strong conviction, arrived at a series of firm agreements on Africa’s economic development plans, signed the Treaty Establishing the African Economic Community and always followed with concern Africa’s economic situation including external debt crisis as well as our adverse multilateral trade relations.

7. While doing so, we have not lost sight of the activities and immense contributions made by our men and women of wisdom and intellect and the efforts of the continent’s various organizations and institutions in this regard. Those men and women have indeed shared with us their thoughts and views on issues relating to security, stability, democracy and peace. Their contributions will be a source of pride for future generations and will form an integral part of the reservoir of global intellectual heritage acquired through international cooperation on the basis of equality, mutual respect, solidarity and peaceful co-existence. We believe that the communities of our various continents should have a collective role in shaping the future of the world without marginalization or discrimination against any given society or culture.

8. Despite the fundamental changes that have taken place in the post independence era, and more particularly since the end of the cold war, there is still the need for establishing a close link between development, democracy, security and stability in the years ahead as the most ideal formula for fulfilling the legitimate aspirations of the peoples of Africa to a decent life, progress and social justice. This formula will enable us solve gradually the acute socio-economic and political problems facing the African Continent. It will also serve as a proper framework for the preservation of the diverse nature of our nations and societies and further enhancement of the fraternal ties that exist between our States.

9. By signing the Treaty Establishing the African Economic Community at our meeting in Abuja in 1991, we have agreed on a Pan-African framework that defines the principles and objectives of African integration in the years ahead. It equally defines the areas of cooperation, coordination of activities and exchange of experiences at the national, regional and continental levels and also among regional organizations and groupings through the common will and action of the OAU, ECA and the ADB.

10. The Thirtieth Anniversary being celebrated at the threshold of the 21st century is an occasion for us to think about the future of the African peoples and nations vis-à-vis the far-reaching changes taking place in the fields of science, technology and communications.

11. We therefore renew our commitment to the principles and values of popular participation in the process of governance and democratic transformation as well as the emphasis on rectitude and accountability on the part of all those who hold public office and the principle of participation in politics by all our citizens, especially women and the youth.

12. The OAU Charter, the international declarations and instruments on human rights and the African Charter on Human and Peoples’ Rights all stipulate that the realisation of freedom, justice and human dignity are the legitimate aspirations of all peoples. Therefore, we undertake to promote the rights and freedoms of our peoples and to enhance the democratic values, ideals and institutions of our States in cultural, social, linguistic and religious diversity and on the basis of respect for the sovereignty of all African States as spelt out in the OAU Charter as well as respect for their political and socio-economic options.

13. The achievement of the objectives of development, integration, democratic transformation and the strengthening of the democratic institutions, requires peace and stability not only at the internal level but also among African States and in their relations with the outside world.

14. Security and stability have always been our priority concern at the national, regional and continental levels for the achievement of development and integration in the socio-economic and cultural fields in accordance with the aspirations of our governments and peoples so that Africa could become a safe continent, free of weapons of mass destruction and free of all threats and pressures. The establishment of peace and security will not only lead to the reduction of defence expenditure, but will also enable us redirect our resources towards raising the level of production and services, augmenting the living standards or our peoples, creating more job opportunities and achieving economic growth and development. Furthermore, the establishment of peace and security will enable us solve the problems of refugees and displaced persons, settle the existing conflicts of the continent and put an end to the blood-bath and the arms race with all their concomitant devastating socio-economic and political consequences.

15. We have agreed at our Dakar meeting of 1992 that the continuation of the various conflicts in the African continent has an adverse effect on the continent’s security, stability and economic development. As a result; we have renewed our determination to work in unison for the peaceful resolution of all our conflicts and stressed the urgent need for Africa to take the appropriate steps for the prevention, management and resolution of conflicts within the framework of the OAU and in consonance with the principles and objectives of its Charter.

16. Finally, the future of Africa, its security and progress are linked with those of the entire world. At a time when the international relations are being re-shaped, Africa cannot but as of right, participate in that exercise as a continent whose States form more than one quarter of the membership of the international community of nations, a Continent with immense wealth, potential, market and culture and a population of some 700 million.

17. We look forward to the future with confidence and call upon our peoples to proceed steadily and triumphantly towards ushering in an era of cooperation and solidarity that will enable them to effectively take part in the process of shaping the new world; the world of the 21st Century.

4.1.8. Declarations and Resolutions adopted by the Thirtieth Ordinary Session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government at its Thirtieth Ordinary Session from the 13th to the 15th June, 1994, Tunis, Tunisia

Believing in the rationale of a balanced development that takes account of the needs of the present and the requirements of the future, striking a balance between the aspirations of the present ad the rights of the future generations to live in a cohesive economic, social and environmental climate, as called for by the International Community in the Declaration of the United Nations World Conference on Environment and Development held in Rio de Janeiro;

3. there is need to promote the conditions that lent themselves to comprehensive development in a climate of political stability, peace and security;

4. there is need to consolidate a democracy founded on participation, encouraging initiatives and organizational patterns that would enable our societies to influence development and rely on their own capacities so as to shield themselves against all forms of violence, extremism and discrimination;

6. there is need to take action, in the scope of an exchange of interests among States, to consolidate all forms of joint development in favour of the progress of mankind and in order to safeguard international peace and security;

7. there is need to encourage the merging and consolidation of natural developmental efforts in Africa so as to curb the on-going deterioration of the terms of trade that adversely affect the African countries and to work out new forms of international cooperation that take into account the value of social efforts and the difficult conditions in which they are made and, in this connection, alleviate the burden of the external indebtedness of Africa and enable the investment of due external debts in programmes relevant to the development of human resources and for environmental purposes;

8. there is need to ensure, through bilateral cooperation programmes and those of the United Nations and other international institutions, a close relationship between economic and social development and always bear in mind that the progress of man and his optimum prosperity are the highest objective of mankind at the threshold of a new century.

AHG/Res.235 and 236 (XXXI)

Resolution on the African economic community

Annex: relaunching Africa’s economic and social development: the Cairo agenda for action

I. PREAMBLE

We, the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity meeting at the Thirty-First Ordinary Session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, from the 26th to 28th of June, 1995, have undertaken an in-depth and critical review of the political, economic and social situation in our continent, as presented in the Report of the Secretary-General to the Special Session of the Council of Ministers on Economic and Social Issues in African Development.

II. WHAT WE CAN DO FOR OURSELVES

14. Member States should give priority in their development programmes to the basic needs of the people by developing appropriate infrastructure (such as rural roads, potable water supply ...), meeting basic food requirements, providing primary health services, education and skills and generating productive and remunerative employment opportunities as a means of eradicating poverty. African countries should endeavour to implement the African Common Position on Human and Social Development; the OAU Declaration of 1991 on the Employment Crisis in Africa; the Dakar/NGOR Declaration on Population, Family and Sustainable Development; the Programme of Action of the ICPD (1994); the Plan of Action for the Promotion of Cultural Industries (1992); the Declaration of the Heads of State and Government on Health as a Basis for Development (1987); as well as the Declaration and Programme of Action of the Copenhagen World Summit for Social Development (1995).

African countries should also endeavour to protect their cultural heritage as provided for in the African Cultural Charter (1976).

4.1.10. Declarations, Resolutions and decision adopted by the thirty-second Ordinary Session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government at its thirty-second Ordinary Session, Yaounde, 8th-10th July 1996

AHG/Decl.3 (XXXII)

Yaoundé declaration (Africa: preparing for the 21st century)

1. We, the Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, meeting in the Thirty-Second Ordinary Session of our Summit in Yaoundé, Cameroon, from the 3rd to the 10th July, 1996 at the invitation of the Government of the Republic of Cameroon have, in the light of the general situation prevailing in Africa at the close of this century, continued to reflect on ways and means of smoothly ushering Africa into the 21st century,

2. We have noted, at the close of the 20th century, that of all the regions of the world, Africa is indeed the most backward in terms of development from whatever angle it is viewed and the most vulnerable as far as peace, security and stability are concerned,

3. We are resolved, at this dawn of the 21st century, to create, by the most appropriate means, conditions to enable Africa to take up the challenges facing it, which, if unresolved, could jeopardize the future of the continent for a long time to come.

THE WORLD AND THE STATE OF AFRICA AT THE DAWN OF THE 21ST CENTURY

6. Nevertheless, in the light of the general evolution of humanity during this century and especially when compared to the other developing continents, such as Latin America and Asia, Africa is lagging far behind and may even be the most under-developed continent of the world as we do admit in our 1994 Declaration on Population and Development in Africa: Indeed, Africa has the lowest life expectancy, the highest infant mortality and illiteracy rates, the lowest GNP, in short, the lowest human development indicator.
Furthermore, close to half of its population lives in poverty and misery, while unemployment and underemployment have become endemic, especially in urban areas. Food production can no longer meet the increasing needs of an ever-growing population. Environmental degradation is worsening due essentially to deforestation, drought, desertification and urbanization, which, according to recent UNFPA estimates, is the fastest in the world. Additionally, the entire African economy is declining and increasingly losing its place in the global economy. Cooperation and regional economic integration are marking time, while official development assistance is decreasing and the external debt burden is becoming heavier. Also, capital flight is coupled with real brain-drain, which, each year, strips Africa of tens of thousands of its sons and daughters, professors, scientists and other highly qualified human resources, which escape to the North as the continent progressively loses its cultural identity in the face of dominant foreign cultures. Lastly, Africa, at present, holds the record of inter-state wars and conflicts, which produce influx of refugees and displaced persons, and result in economic devastation, enormous loss in human life and a drain on its meagre resources.

15. In this regard, we reaffirm the pertinence of the Lagos Plan of Action, the April 1980 Final Act of Lagos and the Abuja Treaty as an appropriate framework for implementing the African strategy of economic, social and cultural integration.

PROMOTION OF AFRICAN CULTURE AND CULTURAL INDUSTRIES

29. Culture is one of the qualitative components of development and is complementary to such other quantitative components as those pertaining to the economic domain. It is therefore a truism to say that the kind of development we want for the 21st Century will also depend on the dynamism of our continent’s culture. Consequently, the continent’s place in the concert of nations of tomorrow and beyond and the pull it will have on the other regions will depend on its cultural development; for there is no doubt that the continent’s culture will go a long way to enable other peoples to better understand the African identity in all its dimensions and thereby change the negative image commonly portrayed of the continent.
30. The creativity of our peoples, the liveliness and richness of African cultural heritage and values should contribute to this development, especially by discarding the small-scale production methods currently in use and evolving towards the large scale production of the continent's cultural artefacts, improving their circulation and controlling their exploitation networks.

31. But the advent of the age of technological explosion, rapid computerization and the breath-taking advancement in communication industries bolstering the trend towards cultural hegemony have confronted Africa with the fundamental problem of aligning its culture with technological know-how.

32. We are convinced that the preservation of African traditional values is perfectly computable with the assimilation of advanced scientific and technological know-how. However, the perpetuation of these values is today threatened by the on-going process of cultural standardization. We must therefore adopt appropriate strategies to safeguard Africa’s traditional values. The OAU very quickly gave this issue serious thought. For decades, it made and is still making tremendous efforts to foster the continent’s cultural development dynamics. The Organisation’s most significant initiatives in this area include the Cultural Charter of Africa and the Plan of Action of Cultural Industries adopted respectively at our Summits in Port-Louis, Mauritius in 1976 and Dakar, Senegal in 1992.

33. While reaffirming its relevance, we reiterate our support for the Dakar Plan of Action on Cultural Industries. At the same time, we request the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of setting up a pan-African Institute of Culture and Arts, with the double purpose of training experts for the management of cultural industries at all levels and serving as the centre of support for African Cultural Artistic Creation.

34. It is in only this way that Africa can survive culturally and continue to contribute to the culture and world civilization.

c) that they consequently draw up Plans for cultural development integrated with national development plans and enjoying the necessary means for their execution;

a) to adhere unswervingly to the view that culture, together with science and education, lies at the very heart of the development process;
b) consequently in seeking to define the new international economic order and in preparing the Programme of Action, to bear in mind the practical implications, which stem from this;

Recalling the major objectives pursued by UNESCO within the context of the World Cultural Development Decade,

Considering that the peoples of Africa share with those of the black diaspora (“Afro-Americans”, particularly Caribbean), the same African origin, which establishes family ties among them, the same history of the slave trade with its consequences on the cultural, economic and social development of their respective communities as well as a common desire to promote among themselves a trans-Atlantic cooperation, for a common development taking into account the affinities of their cultural identities,

- Understand the economic, political and ideological consequences of the Slave Trade on Africa and its impact on Societies and Government;
- Determine the demographic consequences of the Slave Trade for the African Continent and assess the gains derived from economies based on the exploitation of slaves.

Considering the firm determination of Africa and the black diaspora to unite and cooperate between themselves as expressed by the First Summit of African Heads of State and Afro-American Leaders held in Abidjan from 17 to 19 April 1991, as well as the recommendation of the International Meeting of Experts on “Slave Route” organized by Haiti in PORT-AU-PRINCE from 11 to 13 August 1991, on the convening of an International Symposium in 1992 at the initiative of Benin with a view to assessing the impact of the events of 1492 on Africa and its diaspora and to reaffirm the commitment of peoples of African origin to respect, as far as every human being is concerned, the objectives of freedom and dignity, as well as defining the mechanisms for promoting cultural and economic development of Africa and its diaspora, Considering that UNESCO has included the “Slave Route” project in the program of activities of the World Cultural Development Decade,

Convinced that the issue of reparations can be resolved in a responsible manner only if the nature of the prejudices suffered is determined methodically and scientifically:
