
6 Argentina's Green Man for All Seasons by Caleb Bach

From starting public events to canvases and installations, Nicolás Uributu has crusaded against man's destruction of nature

14 Magical Mummies of the Atacama by James Langman

Modern research reveals that ancient people of this coastal desert region of Chile developed the world's most complex methods for preserving the dead

24 Poetic Fragments of a Hostess's Hillside by Kathryn Stafford

The once-elegant home of Rio's Laurinda Santos Lobo is now a playground for the imaginations of artists and visitors from around the world

30 All Fired Up in Metepec Text and photographs by Suzanne Murphy-Larronde

The business of ceramics is booming in this Mexican town, where families preserve an age-old tradition while fueling the local economy

38 On a Mission to Relive History by Joyce Gregory Wyels

In public events this fall, Californians will reflect on their Spanish and Mexican heritage shaped by colonizers in the name of God and glory

46 The Rubble-Rouser by Beth Kephart Photographs by Armando Waak

The matriarch of coffee farm sets out to rebuild her home and town after the devastating earthquake in El Salvador
